Chancellor Graham Spanier said his summer was almost as busy as the school year. But he did find time to travel with his family to Europe and trace the literary footsteps of Ernest Hemingway.

Spanier travels, finds new relative

This summer, UNL Chancellor Graham Spanier shared his family history with Nebraska newspaper readers. To Spanier's surprise, one of those readers was able to help him learn more about his family.

In July, a feature story appeared in an Omaha paper about Spanier and his family background.

The story was about his family's experiences with the Holocaust, during which his father and grandfather were forced to flee Germany and the Nazis.

"I received dozens of letters from people, including a letter from a relative I never knew I had who survived the holocaust and of all places ended up in Omaha, Neb."

"It was probably the most dramatic thing that happened in my life this summer," he said.

But the rest of his summer was dramatic, too, he said.

This summer, Spanier, his wife, Sandra, and their two children — Hadley, 10, and Brian, 13 — went to Europe to trace the steps of author Ernest Hemingway.

Sandra Spanier is an English professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and a Hemingway expert. This summer, she served as chairwoman of a session at the International Hemingway Conference in Paris.

One of the highlights of the trip, Graham Spanier said, was going to Pamplona, Spain, to see the running of the bulls.

"That was the most amazing thing I've seen in my life," he said. "I took my video camera, and I have a picture of a guy being gored right there (in front of me)."

After traveling and finding new family members, Spanier's work still was waiting for him back in Lincoln.

"You do pay a price for taking a vacation," he said. "The work doesn't stop. The mail keeps arriving each day you are gone."

The pace during the summer is different from the fall and spring semesters, he said, but it's still busy.

NCLU

mise violated free speech.

ASUN President Andrew Loudon said he hoped the issue could remain on campus. However, he said, some of the claims against ASUN were unfair.

"I don't feel like we have violated anyone's First Amendment rights," Loudon said. "I think UPC does a fine job of programming. That's never been an issue."

Loudon said some accountability was needed in UPC. He said ASUN representatives were held accountable to students because they were elected by the student body, and UPC was not.

"I think it is important that UPC remains autonomous," Loudon said. "It is an issue of accountability, not free speech."

Collins said in order for NCLU to get involved, the internal campus process must fail.

"If things don't get worked out in the university, that's when we would get more formally involved," Collins said.

She said formal involvement would mean the signing of agreements that stated the NCLU would represent UPC and the hiring of a lawyer.
