Track athletes prepare, repair

By Trevor Parks
Staff Reporter

The Nebraska men's and women's track and field teams appear to be in good shape as they prepare for the upcoming season, Coach Gary Pepin said.

Several Cornhuskers competed over the summer, giving them valuable experience against some of the top competition in the world.

On the women's side, sophomore Angee Henry won the long jump at the national Junior Olympics.

Sophomore sprinter Mark Graham competed at the Commonwealth Games. However, Graham hurt his hamstring, Pepin said, and that hampered his performance.

Pepin said the return of 1993 Big Eight long jump champion Robert Thomas would be a major factor in an area with which the Huskers had problems last season.

"I think Robert's return will help our long jump," Pepin said. "Hopefully he can do a good job in the sprints, too."

Coach - Gary Pepin

While some Huskers prepared for next season, others had off-season surgery to repair for the upcoming season.

Pepin said All-American senior sprinter Shanelle Porter had surgery on her injured foot, which kept her out of the outdoor season. Porter will be able to run once the outdoor season rolls around, Pepin said.

Porter has used up her eligibility for the indoor season.

Junior sprinter Kathy Travis also had surgery on her foot.

Pepin said Travis had made good progress, and he was optimistic that she would be ready for the indoor season.

Also on the women's side, senior thrower Dagmar Pesakova had minor surgery on her wrist.

"Virtually everybody is in good health, and there are no major worries," Pepin said.

Pepin said he had been busy this summer recruiting, because the Huskers had picked up only four recruits after last year's indoor season.

As September begins, Nebraska almost has completed recruiting for the season, and Pepin said things had gone well.

"We've done a good job of getting a good group of athletes," Pepin said.

Pepin said the men's team had few scholarships to offer, but the athletes he recruited should be able to contribute right away.

On the women's team, which was the No. 1 dual meet team last year, Pepin said he still was looking for more players.

"We're hoping at the end of the semester the wheelbarrow will fill up," he said.

Although recruiting has gone well, Pepin still isn't sure how well everyone will do.

"You never know what you have until a couple of meets into the season," he said.

NU linebacker Worthy to be off fall roster

From Staff Reports

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said linebacker Ramone Worthy, who was a redshirt freshman last year, would not be on the Cornhuskers' roster this season and would probably transfer.

"He's not currently on the squad," Osborne said. "There were some personal problems, and I don't know if he's going to continue here or not. My understanding is that he asked for a transfer or release. We would be willing to put him back on scholarship at semester if he wants to stay."

Osborne said that because Worthy was taken off scholarship, he withdrew from his fall classes.

NOTE:

Nebraska got its first taste of hitting since its victory over West Virginia with a two-hour practice Wednesday in full pads.

The Huskers ran live pass protection and five live plays from the goal line.

Fourth-string quarterback Monte Christo sprained his thumb, and Osborne said Christo was questionable for today's practice.

"We had a fairly heavy practice today, and it went all right," Osborne said. "Nobody hurt in a major way. Monte Christo sprained his thumb a little bit. I hope he's able to throw (Thursday), but I question whether he can or not."
