Valentino's

Proudly Serving Selleck

Val's pizza tops menu in halls

Students living in the residence halls this year will have a chance to eat Valentino's pizza five times a week.

Valentino's has signed a contract with the food service division of housing to serve pizza in all residence hall cafeterias for the 1994-95 school year.

University of Nebraska-Lincoln housing and food services took bids during the summer from local pizza companies, said Douglas Rix, assistant director of housing food service.

A student taste panel was formed to give student input on the choice. The panel's choices were evenly divided between Valentino's and Godfather's, Rix said, but Valentino's bid was the lowest.

The residence halls began contracting to serve pizza in January 1994. Godfather's had the lowest bid and thus the contract last year. The program was continued this year because of good response from students, Rix said.

Jason Gildow, a junior advertising major, said he was excited when he heard Valentino's got the contract for this year. The Valentino's pizza tastes better, he said.

"It tastes like it would if you actually went to the restaurant," he said.

Gildow, who lives in Pound Residence Hall, said the Godfather's pizza often tasted stale by the time he ate lunch.

Rix said as many as 300 pizzas a day were delivered to the residence halls.

Two deliveries are made to each hall cafeteria with the exception of Selleck Residence Hall, where three deliveries are made because of its extended lunch hours.

All the pizzas are delivered in insulated containers and removed and served as needed. Part of the Valentino's contract is that all deliveries must be made within five minutes of the times established.

The pizzas will be served during three lunches and two dinners a week, Rix said. On the other days, a deli bar will be served.

Six different kinds of pizza will be available, including hamburger, cheese, pepperoni, vegetarian, Canadian bacon and sausage.

Two ASUN graduate senators resign

Legislative ideas to be proposed

By Melanie Brandert

ASUN President Andrew Loudon announced the resignation of two senators from the graduate college during the senate's meeting Wednesday night.

Monte Horst and Mohammad Shahin, graduate senators of the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska, resigned because they could not fulfill their duties due to time conflicts, Loudon said during his presidential report.

After the meeting, he said the senate has had problems in the past with retaining graduate senators.

Charles Hamilton, one of two graduate senators remaining on the senate, agreed it has been one of ASUN's biggest problems.

He said graduate senators needed to devote a lot of time to the senate. Many can't find that time.

"The graduate senator's role is to give guidance and to give advice," Hamilton said. "We deal with a lot of issues."

Loudon said applications would be taken this week to fill the open positions. Currently, he is interviewing applicants for an additional graduate senator position left by the graduation of senator Tom Allison.

Loudon also told senators during the meeting to begin thinking about legislation. He said they should look within their colleges for ideas. He also suggested they should contact Dave Milligan, speaker of the senate, if they needed assistance in writing the resolutions.

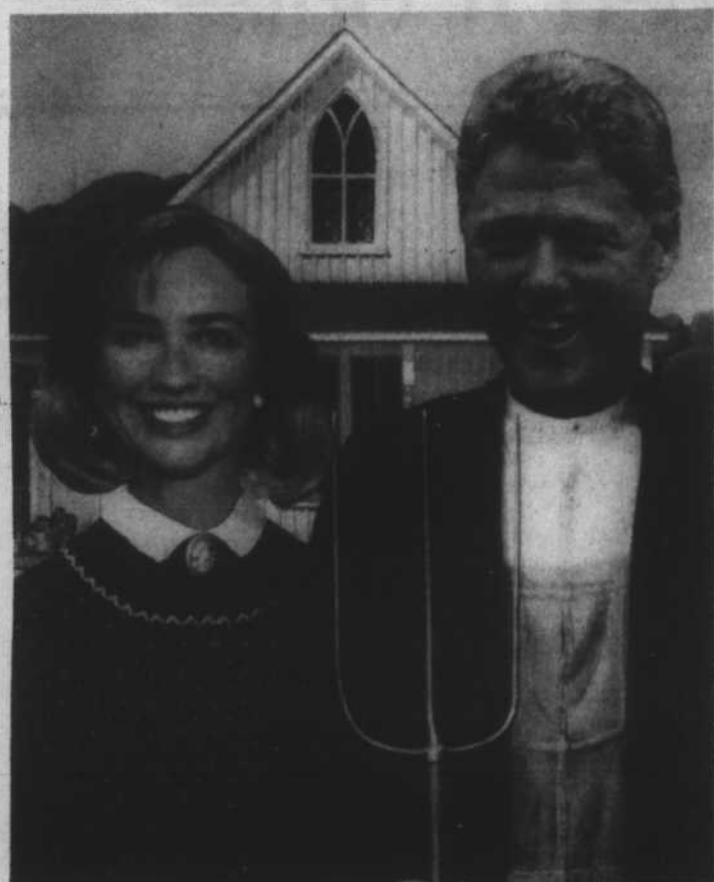

Judy Rishel, second vice president, echoed Loudon's statements by encouraging senators to attend college advisory board meetings.

"It's an excellent way for senators to get to know the members of the advisory board and to get ideas for legislation," she said.

Rishel also said bylaw changes for the Five-Year Projection Committee and the Residence Liaison Committee were not prepared for the meeting because they needed more changes. They would be ready for next week's meeting, she said.

Annie Jones, Homecoming coordinator and senator from the Teachers College, gave a progress report about Homecoming activities. She said ASUN needed to create events that students wanted.

In other action, the senate approved the recognition of the following student organizations: Animal Science Graduate Student Association, Gaming Guild of Lincoln, Minorities in Agriculture, Natural Resources and Related Sciences, National Association of Black Journalists and The Combs Campus Coalition.
