a movie theater-sized screen gave a twisted visual accompaniment to "Erase Me" and "Burn."

The band retook the stage with a vengeance. Jumping and screaming along with Reznor, the crowd resumed its moshing with the playing of "Head Like a Hole."

The smoke from cigarettes, tobacco and otherwise, wafted up and mingled with the smoke from onstage, creating a thick haze that glowed in the spotlights.

The smell of sweat and marijuana permeated the Civic after the moshpit took over full-strength.

Nine Inch Nails played most of the songs from its latest album, "The Downward Spiral," but delighted the crowd by playing a lot of earlier stuff from "Pretty Hate Machine" and "Broken."

The group saved some of the best for last, encoring with "Like an Animal," "Sanctified," "Dead Souls" and "Something I Can Never Have."

Reznor gave a stellar performance to the throng, who left looking drained but satisfied.

Project is to create an exchange between the artists and the audiences who share their work and their world.

"The Wagon Train Project tries to make a direct community relationship between performers and their audiences," Lamphere said.

The Project wants to give the students a chance to get a feeling for how the ensemble becomes a part of its music.

"The ensemble will have a question-and-answer session with the students, who have all been working with the spiritual music," she said.

The acoustics at Lincoln High will produce a different sound than was present at the Lied performance.

"Lincoln High is a very antique-y place," Lamphere said. "It won't be as beautiful as the Lied Center — nothing can be that beautiful — but it will have its own unique flavor."

Tickets for the performance are $12 and available at the door.

Fans started filling in to Husker Haus Saturday morning hours before the Nebraska-UCLA football game. The new sports bar opened Sept. 9 at 1140 O St.

Sports fans have a new Haus

By Sean McCarthy Staff Reporter

Husker Haus, a new sports bar in downtown Lincoln, could not have asked for a better opening weekend.

Last Saturday, the bar was packed to capacity with people watching the Nebraska-UCLA game on any one of the Haus' 25 25-inch television screens.

"I don't know if I have ever seen the town more energized than last Saturday," said Tim Hergenrader, co-owner of Husker Haus.

Husker Haus, located at 1140 O St., opened its doors to the public nearly two weeks ago. The setup of the bar is like most other sports bars around Lincoln, with a few additions.

The bar is decorated with T-shirts of various football teams and shirts commemorating bowl games. The Haus' prize possession is a jersey from last year's Super Bowl. Hergenrader plans to get a player's jersey from next year's Super Bowl to add to the collection.

To establish a courtyard feel, the bar is divided into two areas. Each area contains a bar and dining tables. Television sets are spread equally throughout the bar, making it easy to get a good view of a game.

A game room can be found upstairs. Pool tables, shuffle board and pinball machines are located on either side of the bar. And yes, Husker Haus does have food and drink specials.

In addition to the traditional munchies set out for happy hour, Husker Haus offers a spread of food on Friday night, Hergenrader said. The Haus also offers specials for Monday night football.

Husker Haus has 25 TV sets and a big-screen set to make viewing easy for customers. Hergenrader said he planned to get another big-screen to put in the back of the bar.

"It comes down to convenience," Hergenrader said. "People can sit down, watch a game and not be hassled."

Because Husker Haus is located near the O Street strip of bars that many students frequent, Hergenrader said he hoped to tap into that market.

"Lots of college students don't get the treatment they deserve in bars," Hergenrader said. "We try to create a real friendly, clean atmosphere."

"This first week met all my expectations. We've really improved on our lunch and night crowds," he said. "Come on down and check us out."
