SUN to discuss regent proposa

By Melanie Brandert Staff Reporter

ASUN senators will decide today whether to approve a bill that would direct Government Liaison Committee members to lobby against Gov. Ben Nelson's proposal to appoint NU

Andrew Loudon, president of the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska, said he was concerned how Nelson's proposed bill, which was drafted last week by Sen. Ardyce Bohlke of Hastings, would affect students' ability to appeal to regents as elected officials.

Regents currently are elected by Nebraska voters. If NU regents were appointed, Loudon said, students couldn't present them with concerns as constituents.

"Students wouldn't have as much impact if regents were appointed," Loudon said. "They (regents) would become an extension of the adminis-

Loudon said Nelson's proposal was unnecessary because the current process held the university directly accountable to Nebraska voters since their tax money funded the univer-

"They (regents) serve as watchdogs over administration because they're accountable to the voters," he said. "Twenty-four thousand of those voters are UNL students."

The senate also will vote on a bylaw change that would designate the second vice-president as the chairman of the Student Life Commis-

Loudon said the change, which would take effect with next year's senate, would add to the duties of the second vice-president, whose responsibilities include serving as a liaison to the Residence Hall Association and UNL cultural groups and as chairman of the Five-Year Projection Com-

The student life commissioner's role is to oversee appointees to ASUN committees, such as the Parking Advisory Board and Curriculum Development, and to ensure that appointees attend meetings and that committees have adequate student representation.

If the bylaw change passes, the position of student life commissioner would be eliminated.

Loudon said the bylaw change was proposed because past second vice presidents had complained about not having enough responsibility with their office.

ing the creation of tobacco-free floors. This is going to be a special floor for people who really need to be smoke-free," said RHA President Andrea Casart. The tobacco-free floors would be located on the lower levels of the high-rise residence halls because of complaints that smoke rises through the floors and ventila-tion systems, Casart said.

The initial plan is to have two to three floors per residence hall, she said. Students would indicate on their housing contracts whether they wanted to live on these floors.

The plan will be implemented in the fall semester of 1995, and the number of tobacco-free floors will depend on demand, Casart said.

The resolution was passed to support the creation of university housing for students who are allergic or ultra-sensitive to tobacco, said Chuck Rensink, the complex program director of Harper-Schramm-Smith.

One resident said he favored the

The university's current policy states that residents can smoke in their rooms with the door closed and with permission from their roommates. The university also provides substance-free floors in Smith and Harper.
"These floors are for people who choose to live in a substance-free lifestyle," Rensink said. "We want to give them that option."

Casart said UNL's policies were in tune with policies throughout the United States.

NU libraries may benefit from increased funding

A request this year by both the NU Board of Regents and Gov. Ben Nelson has put emphasis on improv-ing the NU Libraries.

Nelson's annual budget called for $685,000 over two years and an 11 percent increase per year in funds to be given to the libraries for book acquisitions and services. That is approximately $600,000 less than what the Regents originally requested in their proposal.

The Regents requested $1.25 million over two years in additional funds for library acquisitions and services, along with a 15 percent increase in the acquisition line, which maintains the current level of library purchases.

The increase in funding is needed to keep up with the rising cost of purchasing new acquisitions, said Kent Hendrickson, dean of UNL Li-

"Our budget is not rising with the inflating prices of acquisitions," Hendrickson said.

He said the price of acquisitions had increased 12 to 14 percent per year on subscriptions and 7 to 8 percent on book acquisitions.

The proposed increase would give UNL libraries $450,000 more with the 15 percent increase. The amount given to UNL is larger than that given to other campuses because its budget base is larger and because it is the only research library in the system, Hendrickson said.

A recent ranking of 110 college libraries around the country ranked UNL's library 72nd for the 1993 fiscal year. This ranking was based on "The rankings aren't measures of quality in any way," Hendrickson said. "If we were positioned properly we should have been around 50 or so because we have to support a very comprehensive curriculum with resources that can't support them."

With the proposed increase in library funding, Hendrickson said he hoped to improve aspects of the library system, such as higher performing work stations and more purchasing power for the libraries.

"We also want to try and provide more training of students and faculty on the use of the information highway and the Internet," Hendrickson

He said the library could offer classes to teach people how to find things using the Internet in the fall of
