Historical Society series looksbackatAtomicAge

By Jeff Randall

The Nebraska State Historical Society is hoping to give audiences a blast from the past.

"The Atomic Age" is the subject of the society's historical series this year. All events related to it are free and open to the public.

Andrea Paul, associate director of the historical society's library and archives, said that for the society's purposes, the Atomic Age began in 1945 with the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It ended in 1963, she said, the year of President John F. Kennedy's assassination and the firstever signing of an atomic weaponslimitations treaty.

An exhibit at the historical society, 15th and P streets, features memorabilia from this period of both rapid growth and tremendous fear.

A series of "brown bag" lectures will cover aspects of the Atomic Age, ranging from everyday life to witnessing an atomic explosion to "The Twilight Zone."

A film series, "A Blast from the Past," will consist of 10 presentations designed to provide a contemporary visual look at the Atomic Age.

Other events include collection and research workshops and a special Atomic Age issue of "Nebraska His-society's curator of manuscripts and audio-visual collections, said the Atomic Age was an appealing topic for everybody.

'A lot of people are familiar with historical subjects like the Civil War relevant to this generation. It is still and the pioneer days strictly in an timely.'

academic sense," Eisloeffel said. With the Atomic Age, we're tapping into memories.

"Whether it's someone who was an adult during this time, or was growing up during this time, or even for younger people remembering the fall of the Berlin Wall a few years ago, everybody has a memory to associate with this subject."

Using well-known films is one way of helping people relive those memo-ries, Eisloeffel said. The films also illustrate important issues during the time period, including: youth rebel-lion, "Rebel Without a Cause"; the Red Scare, "Invasion of the Body Snatchers"; changing sex roles, "Adam's Rib"; and the impending atomic destruction of World War III, Dr. Strangelove.

"We're trying to provide a critical look back at the Atomic Age through the use of contemporary cinema," he Seeing different aspects of more current public figures was another benefit of examining the atomic age, Paul said.

"You see people like Richard Nixon, (Nikita) Khrushchev, in a completely different light," she said. We have a clearer eye now, and we can look back and even laugh at some of the things that went on."

'We're hoping to show people that tory," the society's journal. the historical society is not just deal-Paul J. Eisloeffel, the historical ing with topics that they might regard as stodgy.'

Paul agreed with Eisloeffel's sentiment.

"This is not dead history," she said. "It is history that is alive and
