

Bowling

But Jake, thanks to Hall's inspired acting, remains the star of the show. Jake's simple, loveable nature shines through as he courts Loretta.

Having gone through two wives, Jake is not sure if he can love again. He tells Loretta he really likes her, but she requires love before she will marry him.

After kissing Loretta passionately (and rather lengthily), Jake softens a little. "I damn near ... almost love ya, Loretta," Jake said. An already good theater experience is made perfect by the delightful soundtrack, selected by Futz artistic director Paul Pearson. "Bowling" is a great season opener for the Futz, a small theater company that performs out of a 35-by-15 room in the Mission Arts Building. From the simple, hand-painted set to the nostalgic 1950s soundtrack, "Bowling" was a delight for all present.

Lincolmites roll into Stone

By Jeff Randall
Staff Reporter

Lincoln band Mercy Rule is no longer just a band. Now it's much, much more.

It's a "smart pop-punk trio." This is the moniker given to vocalist/bassist Heidi Ore, guitarist/vocalist Jon Taylor and drummer Ron Albertson by Rolling Stone magazine.

"I guess it's better than being called a stupid pop-punk trio," Taylor said.

Mercy Rule was featured in the national music magazine's annual "New Faces" piece, a lineup of promising new bands selected by Rolling Stone writers.

"I know that Relativity (Mercy Rule's record label) has invited Rolling Stone writers to our shows whenever we've played New York in the past," Ore said. "I guess we must have caught someone's eye."

Ore said the article was a bit of a surprise to her and her bandmates. "We had very little to do with it," she said. "The picture that went along with it was taken last summer for another article."

Receiving attention from one of the nation's largest music periodicals is just one of the good things that happened to Mercy Rule in 1994, Ore said.

The band's second full-length album, "Providence," received overwhelmingly positive responses from critics. The band has also seen increasingly larger attendance figures at its shows.

"It's kind of hard to describe," Ore said. "I don't think we could have written better record reviews ourselves. People really seem to be getting our message, what we're trying to say."

The members of Mercy Rule have been occupying themselves lately with a number of weekend shows in Midwestern cities including Madison, Wis., Chicago and St. Louis, Ore said.

A more extensive tour of the West Coast is in the planning stages for March, she said.

Drover's Celtic blend to blow into Hurricane

By Rainbow Rowell
Music Critic

The Drovers, a Chicago-based band, will appear at the Hurricane, 1118 O St., Friday at 9:30 p.m.

The band will be opening up for Lincoln's own Millions, who are kicking off a tour of the United States and Europe.

The Drovers were featured in the 1994 thriller "Blink," starring Aidan Quinn ("Legends of the Fall") and Madeleine Stowe ("Last of the Mohicans"). Stowe played a fictional member of the Drovers, who appeared as themselves.

The quartet will be performing tunes from their 1994 EP, "Kill Mice Elf," and their 1992 album, "World of Monsters."

Their blend of Celtic melodies, experimental pop and moody, wandering lyrics is wonderfully listenable.

Anyone who is at least 19 can catch the Drovers' Lincoln show for $4 with a can of food or $5 without a can.
