

Husker power blows Cyclones away Harrison

By Jeff Griesch
Senior Reporter

The game wasn't pretty, but to the Nebraska women's basketball team, the final score was beautiful.

The Cornhuskers dominated Iowa State from start to finish in a 67-54 win in front of a crowd of 4,088 at the Bob Devaney Sports Center Sunday.

The Huskers, 11-8 overall and 2-5 in the Big Eight, used an aggressive full-court press to disrupt Iowa State's offense and cause turnover after turnover.

The Cyclones, 7-12 overall and 0-7 in the conference, turned the ball over 12 times in the first half as the Huskers raced to a 34-25 lead.

For the game, the Huskers forced 23 Cyclone turnovers and often made Iowa State take 15-20 seconds to get into its offense.

"We planned on pressing them and thought we could force some turnovers," Beck said.

"They weren't able to do the things they wanted to do."

Despite the effectiveness of Nebraska's press, the Cyclones stayed in the game behind the strong inside play of Jayme Olson and Janel Grimm.

Olson, a 6-foot-1 freshman forward, scored 14 points, while Grimm, a 6-2 freshman center, added 8 points.

"Iowa State is a tough team to play against because they play a rugged, slow-down game," Beck said. "They just hang around and won't go away."

Junior guard Kate Galligan led the Huskers with 15 points in the first half, and finished with a game-high 21 points.

But Galligan's lack of turnovers was even more impressive than her abundance of points.

Galligan had been averaging a team-worst 4.1 turnovers per game, but did not commit a single turnover against the Cyclones.

"The no turnovers definitely feels better than scoring 21 points," Galligan said. "It gets really frustrating turning the ball over all the time, especially when so many of them have been unforced."

While Galligan had her best day taking care of the ball this season, her teammates couldn't find the handle and committed 23 turnovers.

"We just get overexcited and make silly mistakes with the ball," Galligan said.

Despite the turnovers, Nebraska guard Lis Brenden said the win was still a big one for the Huskers.

"We didn't really play that exciting of a game, but we got what we needed—a win and some confidence," Brenden said.

Brenden scored 8 points and dished out 5 assists. Pyra Aarden scored 12 points, while Anna DeForge poured in 11 points. Husker guard Tina McClain added 10.

Jayme Olson led the Cyclones with 14 points.

Galligan said regardless of how the game looked, the Huskers had to beat the Cyclones.

Harrison also spent a year in Venezuela, two winters in the Mexican Pacific League and a year in the Mexican Summer League.

He returned to Nebraska last fall as a full-time student and the Huskers' pitching coach.

Harrison played for the Huskers from 1984 until 1986, and holds the NCAA single-season record with 33 pickoffs. He won 10 games for Nebraska in 1984 and struck out 98 batters in 1986. Both rank second-best of all time in the Nebraska record books.

Harrison said he would continue to work with the pitchers until Feb. 15.

"John Sanders has been a real gentleman about this whole deal. He told me if he had the same opportunity, he would have done the same thing," Harrison said. "He has given me until April 15 to give playing a chance. After that, he will try to find a replacement for me."

Until he reports to spring training, Harrison said he would be working to get in shape.

"If I'm going to do this, I'm going to go all out," Harrison said. "I have nothing to lose."

Swimmers dominate Mizzou

By Andrew Strnad
Staff Reporter

The Nebraska men's and women's swimming teams showed Saturday that both teams are ready for the Big Eight meet.

Both teams dominated Missouri at the Bob Devaney Sports Center Saturday afternoon.

The 19th-ranked men won 12 of the 16 events and posted a 183-104 victory.

Cornhusker swimming coach Cal Bentz was very pleased with the team's performance.

"We really put up some good times today in many events," he said. "We were a lot more focused than we were last week, I was real happy with how we swam."

Leading the Huskers to victory was Justin Finney, who won the 100-meter butterfly with a time of 50.94 seconds.

"Justin had a great race," Bentz said. "I think he's going to be a force for us going into the Big Eight meet."

Other winners for the Huskers included Juan Benavides in the 50-meter freestyle, Chris Ford in the 100-meter backstroke, Rodney Johnston in the 100-meter breaststroke and sophomore Conny Wennberg in the 200-meter breaststroke.

"I think this gives us a good idea of where we are at going into the conference meet," Bentz said.

Nebraska divers Jeff Bro and Jennifer Harnly swept the 1-meter and the 3-meter springboard events. Diving coach Jim Hocking was very happy with his divers' performances.

"I feel strong about where we're at right now," he said. "We should be in prime shape come conference time."

The 14th-ranked Husker women also won 12 of the 16 events and took the meet, 171-125.

Three Huskers won two events for the women. Jane Glazebrook took the 200 backstroke and the 100 butterfly, and Melanie Dodd won the 100 and 200 freestyles.

Brianna Wilkins also won two events by capturing the 1000 freestyle and the 400 individual medley relay. Wilkins won the 400 I.M. by more than 11 seconds.

The Nebraska swimming and diving teams conclude their dual meet season next Saturday against Kansas at the Bob Devaney Sports Center.

"These final dual meets are very important to our success at the Big Eight meet," Hocking said. "Right now, I feel that we are doing the things we need to do to get to that next level."

"The Kansas meet next weekend will be a good challenge for us."

Gymnasts suffer losses, scramble against Mizzou

From Staff Reports

The Nebraska women's gymnastics team suffered three losses on Saturday.

But only one will count against its record.

After jumping out to a big lead after the first two rotations, the No. 16 Huskers fell on the floor exercise and ended up with a loss against Missouri. Missouri, which entered the meet with an 0-5 record, defeated the Huskers for a 188.15-187.50 win in Columbia, Mo.

The Huskers also lost two of their top performers against the Tigers. Senior Martha Jenkins hyperextended her elbow while warming up for the uneven bars. And sophomore all-rounder Kim DeHaan was battling a virus and was only able to compete in the first two rotations.

"We went from being really well prepared for this meet to scrambling because of the numbers," Husker coach Dan Kendig said.

But Kendig said there were a few bright spots in the Huskers' loss.

Husker senior Nicole Duval led a Husker trio that grabbed the top three spots in the all-around. Duval scored a 38.05, while Joy Taylor's 37.95 earned second place. Sophomore Shelly Bartlett finished third.

The Huskers will play host to Oklahoma this Saturday in a 7 p.m. dual at the Bob Devaney Sports Center.

Wrestlers split weekend duals in Oklahoma

From Staff Reports

The Nebraska wrestling team left Oklahoma with a split.

After losing to No. 2 Oklahoma State Friday, the Cornhuskers defeated No. 12 Oklahoma 28-8 on Sunday.

The Huskers captured eight of 10 matches against the Sooners, including a major decision by Mike Roller at 158 pounds.

On Friday, the Huskers fell behind early against Oklahoma State. The No. 2 Cowboys jumped out to a 13-3 lead after the first four weight classes and cruised to a 23-14 win.

Oklahoma scored only 11 points in the final 11 minutes of the first half, but still went into the locker room with a 36-31 lead.

"We came out here and scrapped," first-year Oklahoma coach Kelvin Sampson said. "Nebraska's got a talented team and we found a way to win. The thing about our team is that we continually find ways to win."

Who will answer the international 911?

Geopolitical changes have left the United Nations and the United States—historically, global peacekeepers—unprepared to contain repression and nationalistic struggles abroad.

The next lecturer in the E.N. Thompson Forum on World Issues, former U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Donald F. McHenry, will offer a unique perspective on this paramount question.

a jump of 19-3 3/4 to take the long jump.

Last year's indoor national champion Nicola Martial won the triple jump as expected with a jump of 41-10 1/2, and freshman Annette Hall won the 55-meter dash, edging out North Carolina sprinter Latasha Colander by .01 with a time of 6.971.

The North Carolina women took control of the meet by taking both the 55-meter hurdles and the 200-meter dash.

The Husker men had eight winners, including two of which who have automatically qualified for the NCAA championships in March.

Two-time All-American Robert Thomas qualified for the NCAAs with a long jump of 26-2 3/4. Thomas also won the triple jump with an attempt of 50-6.

High jumper Petar Malesev brought the crowd to its feet with his jump of 7-5, which also automatically qualified the three-time All-American for the NCAA's.

Husker Greg Armitage won the 35-pound weight toss with a throw of 61-9 1/2, breaking his previous best by almost 10 feet.

Chad Jansen won the mile with a time of 4:20.0. Balazs Tolgyesi won the 800-meter run with a time of 1:49.56, and freshman Scott Warren won the shot put with a throw of 57-10 1/2.

The Husker indoor track team travels to Champaign, Ill., Saturday before returning home for the Frank Sevigne Husker Invite on Feb. 10-11 at the Devaney Center.
