

Fight breaks out in stands

From Staff Reports

As Oklahoma State University was beating the Cornhusker men's basketball team on the court Wednesday night, two fans were beating each other.

Jason Lovejoy, 20, and Aaron Freeman, 18, were thrown out of the Devaney Sports Center after a fight broke out between them, Sgt. Bill Manning of the University Police Department said.

Manning said the fight broke out because one person was standing in front of the other. Manning said one shoved the other, and "the fight was on."

Both Lovejoy and Freeman were cited for third-degree assault, mutual combatants, Manning said.

No other fans were hurt during the fight, and the two men left without incident, Manning said.

textbook. Gruhl was responsible for writing five chapters in each version. He also edited the books and selected photos and cartoons.

Above all, Gruhl said, he is a teacher before a political scientist. He said he spent most of his time teaching, and felt fortunate that UNL allowed him the freedom to do that.

Painfully shy before he began teaching, Gruhl said he still felt that he might not be the most exciting lecturer on campus.

But, he said, he doesn't strive for that. Instead, he said, he tries to treat all his students as individuals and give them the most complete and accurate information he can.

CFA rejects health center request

The Committee for Fees Allocation denied the University Health Center's request for a 2.23 percent budget increase Thursday night.

Instead, the committee voted to recommend a .5 percent increase to pay for higher telecommunication costs.

CFA's health center subcommittee said the center could streamline operations to cover its requested increases.

The health center's request would have paid for an additional full-time nurse and part-time physical therapist.

Members of the health center subcommittee said the center could streamline operations to cover its requested increases.

The subcommittee suggested raising revenue sources and decreasing funding for outreach programs such as the health aide program, peer alcohol educators and peer sexuality educators.

The subcommittee also recommended that the health center cease keeping an orderly on duty between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

"At some time you have to work through and decide which things are more important than others," greek representative Shelley Kathol said.

Brian Buescher, CFA residence hall representative, said it was unfair to charge off-campus students for benefits utilized by students living in residence halls or Greek houses.

"For the students who are not using the services as much, I think it's only fair to give them a break," he said.

CFA voted in favor of the .5 percent increase for funding the upgrade and development of the telecommunications systems at the health center. The $15,500 increase will be needed, members said, because the rewiring of phones and data connections will have to be done eventually.

CFA also heard director Daryl Swanson's budget request for the Nebraska Unions.

Swanson requested a 2.55 percent budget increase from student fees, which would grant an additional $44,233 to the unions' budget.

Swanson said he wanted to use the increased funds to improve conditions for union employees.

He said he also wanted to implement a comprehensive training program to improve employee skills and performance levels.

The increase would also add funding to the Women's Center.
