RHA members get online with new computer plan

By Laura King Staff Reporter

Members of the Residence Hall Association heard Sunday about the proposed plan to upgrade computer networking services and hall computer labs over the next several years. Doug Zatechka, former housing director, presented the plan to RHA and discussed details and concerns with them.

"I'm a lot more pleased than I was two or three weeks ago," Zatechka said. "I was never opposed to the initial plan; I just want costs for residence hall students to stay reasonable.'

The plan, recently forwarded to the NU Board of Regents, calls for a 6.5 percent increase in housing costs for incoming freshmen. Returning residence hall students would receive a $60 increase per year for the next three to four years.

A campus-wide committee conducted a survey and researched schools in the Big 10 and Big Eight to determine the best plan for UNL's computer system.

Even with the increases, Zatechka said, UNL would have the lowest from residents about their concerns.

costs among other universities in its peer group. UNL's rates are $836 below the average rates at ten schools in the Big 10 and Big Eight. "What Nebraska has planned is very similar to these schools and less expensive to students," Zatechka said.

Some of the system charges at those schools include additional student fees for hook-up costs and charges per credit hour.

UNL wants to curb those extra costs, Zatechka said.

"We want to eliminate the adding of fee after fee like other schools, Zatechka said.

The Computer Resource Center, as a result, will absorb the $200,000 cost of upgrading computer labs in residence halls, he said.

The system, Zatechka said, should be completed in five years. Two to three halls, in addition to Abel Hall, which currently is connected to the network, will be wired by the fall of 1995, he said.

A decision on which halls will be wired first should be made by the end of March. The ease of wiring the halls and the number of computers in each will be considered in the decision. Zatechka urged RHA to discuss these factors when giving their input on which halls should be wired first.

"Make your voice heard," he said. "You have the ability to get input

Lancaster County gets crime prevention grant

Youth program will be created to deter violence

By Catherine Blalock Staff Reporter

Lancaster County received help last week to fight juvenile crime.

The Lincoln Lancaster Mediation Center received notification that it would receive a $14,853 matching grant, said Jeff Golden, juvenile justice division chief at the Nebraska Crime Commission.

The Crime Commission is administrating funds provided by the Federal Justice System, which is supply-ing $83,000 to four Nebraska communities. The money also will be used for one regional project.

"The primary reasons for the program are prevention and interven-tion," said Betsy Kosier, executive director of the Lincoln Lancaster Mediation Center.

The program will focus on youths, Kosier said. By providing training in mediation, juveniles will learn to deal with problems and gain self-esteem income and household size, Kosier and communication skills. With that,

Mediators will go through at least 30 hours of approved training. Other volunteers have additional special-ized training for working with family or community disputes, Kosier said. The program will focus on commu-nity involvement rather than schools.

Golden said the mediation center must match the grant by 50 percent. The money will be matched through donations.

The Lincoln Lancaster Mediation Center had applied for the grant three times.

"The primary reasons for the program are prevention and intervention."

Kosier said, comes the hope that youths will stay away from violent crime.

The primary group of mediators will come from grades 7 to 12. Students can nominate themselves or be nominated.

The services occur on neutral ground to prevent problems from escalating, and an adult is always nearby.

Cities receiving the funds are Scottsbluff, Gering, Wahoo and South Sioux City.

Montigo Bay

If the license is revoked, Kugler said he would appeal to the state liquor commission.

Montigo Bay opened in April, he said, and this was the first action against the bar's liquor license.

But Montigo Bay's license didn't take effect until November. Before November, the bar operated under the license of the previous operator, Rockin' Robin. After being cited for selling liquor to minors this summer, Kugler said, he paid a $1,000 fine to avoid being closed.

Kugler denied responsibility in the incident.

Since then, he said, security has tightened. Kugler said that was all he could do.

Peschong said Montigo Bay's management had been receptive to police suggestions, but he hadn't seen any change.

Police calls to Montigo Bay de-clined in January. No calls were reported over the weekend. Kugler said if the city council voted against the liquor license, he could continue liquor sales until he went before the commission.
