Assistant-Associate Professors Are you on a tenure line leading to promotion or tenure? If so the following quote from a recent memo to Deans from the Senior Vice Chancellor may affect you.

...The teaching documentation should include an analysis of the raw materials that have been collected describing teaching effectiveness. These could include, for example, assessments of the appropriateness of course design, the quality of course materials and examinations, the level of student performance, and information from graduates....

Do you have or are you presently building a data base that will allow a rational evaluation of your teaching activities? The Teaching Council is prepared to help you with this project through the development of a teaching portfolio.
