ASUN passes own fund increase

By Melanie Brandert
Staff Reporter

ASUN senators approved Wednesday night student fee increases for ASUN and the Lied Center, a decrease for the University Program Council and no increase for the Daily Nebraskan.

The votes were in line with Committee for Fees Allocation recommendations, except for Daily Nebraskan funding. CFA recommended a 10 percent increase for the paper.

CFA Chairwoman Jennifer Cusick said the increase for the Association of Students of the University of Nebraska and the decrease for UPC were attributed to the transfer of $2,000 from UPC's budget to ASUN for Homecoming expenses. She said the majority of ASUN's fee increase would be used for salary increases.

Much of the debate during the meeting centered on the recommended increase for the Daily Nebraskan. That increase would have raised student fee allocations, which pay for printing and circulation costs, from 88 cents to 97 cents per student per semester.

Dave Milligan, speaker of the senate, made a motion for an amendment to deny the Daily Nebraskan an increase.

Milligan said the newspaper's request for an increase, based on rising newsprint costs, conflicted with its long-term goal to operate without using student fees.

Because the Daily Nebraskan is a business, he said, it should raise advertising rates or charge for newspapers circulated off-campus to make up the difference.

The motion passed 19-10 with one abstention.

Other senators expressed support for an increase.

David Hengen, a College of Arts and Sciences senator, motioned for a second amendment that would have given the newspaper a 5 percent increase, which would have raised the student fee allocation to 92 cents. He said the Daily Nebraskan's overall quality would go down if it was denied a fee increase.

The motion failed by a vote of 11-19. Senators then voted on the original amendment a second time, passing the 0 percent increase by a vote of 21-9.

Micron

"While these are not areas that were identified in our study, we do have significant strength in them.

"We will offer these courses in the manner most convenient to Micron, including on-site delivery by faculty."

Included in the accelerated plan is the development of an information sciences program that eventually could develop into a college, he said.

UNO Chancellor Del Weber said high-tech companies, like Micron, were looking for degree offerings, continuing education, applied research and a trained labor force. Flexibility and commitment to industry go beyond that, he said.

Faculty and programs for information sciences already exist at UNO, he said. The programs would be coordinated with engineering courses, Weber said, but separate from the college.

UNL Chancellor Graham Spanier said talk had circulated about creating a construction engineering program. Spanier also promised to open lab facilities and provide faculty for joint projects.

Smith said costs already were a part of the requested budget. The request includes a $1.5 million annual budget increase and $600,000 to hire seven engineering faculty and renovate Omaha engineering facilities.

The latter request is expected to be doubled following a review by the Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education, Smith said.

Plans are also in the works for a multimillion dollar engineering building to be located at UNO.

Omaha is one of three locations in competition for the Micron plant. Smith said NU would continue the fast-paced upgrade regardless of the corporation's decision.

"The rate of implementation has been a subject of concern to the business community in Omaha," Smith said.

Legislature

a battle between senators who wished to see LB830 pass quickly and senators who wanted to improve the language of the bill before voting on it.

Those supporting the bill overcame several attempts by the bill's opponents to filibuster.

Senators' nerves became frazzled by 10:30 p.m., following one failed motion to adjourn. While a motion to end debate on the bill was on the table, Sen. Tim Hall of Omaha, who had two more amendments to introduce, gave up.

"Just run the damn thing," he said. "You've got the votes — go ahead and do it."

Several amendments were passed earlier in the evening.

Sen. George Coorsen of Hebron

sponsored an amendment providing two types of notification to land owners whose property would be declared blighted or substandard. One was through a general newspaper ad, and the other was through a letter mailed to each property owner.

A sunset clause by Sen. Don Wesely of Lincoln would not allow new applications under LB830 after Feb. 1, 2000.

ADM

IF YOU'RE UP FOR THE CHALLENGE, READ ON

ADM is one of the leading agricultural firms in the world. We have one purpose -- to add value to agricultural crops and to increase the worldwide demand for their products. We are considered today to be the largest, most competitive agricultural commodity merchant in the world.

COMMODITY MERCHANDISING

DESCRIPTION:

ADM is seeking bright and energetic young people who are interested in a challenging and potentially highly rewarding career in the agricultural business. The ADM merchant is essentially responsible for guiding the firm through the constantly changing aspects of the agricultural industry. Initially, through our training program, the merchant will learn the dynamics that drive the commodity market. At the completion of the training program, the merchant will be offered the opportunity to move to a position of management in ADM's vast network of agricultural businesses. Candidates must be willing to relocate.

QUALIFICATIONS:

Candidates should possess a successful academic record as well as proven leadership skills. Candidates should have an academic background that includes one or more of the following: management, marketing, business administration, economics, finance, international business, or liberal arts with 20 hours of business (which includes 6 hours of accounting). ADM merchants typically possess GPA's of at least 3.0.
