

Towing fees to rise; permits stay same

Student parking fees for the 1995-96 school year will not increase, the UNL Parking Advisory Committee decided Tuesday.

But students will face a $10 increase in towing fees, from $25 to $35, and an additional $25 fee if the vehicle must be dollied.

The towing contract for the year has been awarded to Lincoln Land Towing Inc., 410 W. P St. A change in contracts was considered, but Lincoln

Land Towing was the only company able to fulfill contract requirements with current facilities, committee member Viann Schroeder said.

She said security also was an issue in choosing the company.

Daryl Swanson, chairman of the committee, said even though fees would not go up next year, an increase for the 1996-97 school year still was a possibility.

Swanson said not increasing permit fees was in part the fulfillment of a commitment made to students last year when fees were raised.

Last year's increase was part of a bond issue approved by the Board of Regents to pay for parking improvements.

Some of those improvements are scheduled for this summer. The largest project is planned for area 1, 2 and 20 lots, primarily commuter lots, at 19th and R streets.

Paving those lots will provide better parking and improve the appearance of the south side of campus, Schroeder said.

Other large projects this summer include improving the lighting on the north side of East Campus Loop and resurfacing lots 3 and 20 at the Harper-Schramm-Smith complex.

Also at the meeting, Joan Konecky, coordinator of electronic reference services with the University of Nebraska libraries, was elected the new chairwoman of the committee.
