Nebraska's Zach Wiegert holds up his jersey, which was retired Saturday at the spring game. The Huskers will have to replace Wiegert, who was drafted by St. Louis, on the offensive line.

Offensive line questions remain

By Mitch Sherman
Senior Reporter

A hard-hitting, aggressive month of spring football has left Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne satisfied, even though several questions remain unanswered.

Going into the spring, Osborne said, the Cornhuskers looked thin at several spots, including the offensive line. SAM linebacker and left cornerback.

The Huskers lost two All-Americans off their line from last year — Zach Wiegert and Brenden Stai. Wiegert had his jersey retired last Saturday at the spring game.

"I think our offensive line was the big question coming in," Osborne said. "I don't think we are overwhelming there, but I think we can put an offensive line out that can play pretty well."

The No. 1 line of Chris Dishman, Aaron Taylor, Aaron Graham, Steve Ott and Eric Anderson, Osborne said, should be solid. Developing depth, Osborne said, is still a top priority.

The departure of Troy Dumas,

Osborne said, left the Huskers thin at SAM linebacker. Redshirt freshman Jay Foreman has emerged as a possible starter. Foreman is even on the depth chart with Larry Arnold.

Osborne said he was pleased with the small post-spring injury report.

The victims Saturday included I-back Damon Benning (turned ankle), split end Riley Washington (sore Achilles' tendon), I-back James Sims (knee bruise) and quarterback Matt Turman (badly bruised left hand).

Top I-back Lawrence Phillips didn't play in the spring game after aggravating both of his hamstrings earlier this month. Also absent because of an injured foot was Michael Booker.

SAM linebacker Sean Noster (shoulder surgery) and free safety Tray Crayton (torn finger ligament) also missed Saturday's game.

Rover Mike Minter played the first half of the spring game. Minter, a junior from Lawton, Okla., is recovering from a torn anterior cruciate ligament suffered Sept. 8 against Texas Tech. Minter was the fastest player on the team before injuring his knee.

During spring testing, he had nearly returned to full speed, running a 4.55-second 40-yard dash. Last winter, Minter ran a 4.41-second 40-yard dash. But Osborne said Minter still was having knee problems.

Defensive coordinator Charlie McBride said he was concerned with Tony Veland's knee. The senior free safety, who started 11 games last season, is still feeling the effects of a torn patellar tendon, injured more than a year and a half ago.

McBride said Veland was hampered during the spring game.

"It's going to be a big factor to find a good backup for Veland," McBride said. "If he isn't able to make it through a spring game, I don't see how he is going to make it through the season. That's a big concern, because right now, I don't think that knee will hold up this year."
