

Experienced receivers take questions from new players

By Jeff Griesch
Senior Editor

Clester Johnson and Reggie Baul have gone from students to teachers as Nebraska wide receivers.

For four years, Johnson and Baul watched, asked questions and learned from Corey Dixon, Nate Turner, Vincent Hawkins, Abdul Muhammad and other receivers.

They studied their routes and blocks and learned the little tricks that experienced receivers know.

Now, instead of asking questions, they are giving the answers.

"I guess I am the most experienced wingback, and a lot of guys have been asking a lot of questions," Johnson said. "It kind of makes me feel old, but it also makes me feel smart."

Johnson, a 5-foot-11, 210-pound senior from Bellevue, caught four passes for 93 yards and two touchdowns last season.

Baul is Nebraska's top returning receiver. The 5-8, 170-pound senior split end had 17 receptions for 300 yards and three touchdowns a year ago.

Baul also set a spring game record with 184 yards on four catches, including a record-setting 80-yard touchdown.

Joining Baul at split end is junior Brendan Holbein, who caught nine passes for 88 yards and two touchdowns.

Holbein said he would join Johnson and Baul as one of the teachers for the young Nebraska receivers. But Holbein said he still had some learning to do.

"I learned from the guys above me when I was a freshman, but I still feel like I could do things a lot better," Holbein said. "But now I feel like I can be more of a leader for the new, young guys."

Holbein, Baul and Johnson all agree that the young Huskers are very talented.

Receivers coach Ron Brown said freshman Kenny Cheatham could be Nebraska's most gifted receiver.

Cheatham, a 6-3, 200-pounder from Phoenix, hasn't played a game at Nebraska, but his size, long strides and soft hands have left Brown speechless.

"I won't tell you how good Kenny Cheatham can be because I don't want him to know he's that good," Brown said. "Right now he hasn't played, and he has a lot to learn. I don't want his talent to go to his head."

Along with Cheatham, sophomore Shevin Wiggins brings huge talent.

Wiggins went to the same high school as Tommie Frazier and Tyrone Williams in Palmetto, Fla. In 1993, Wiggins was the Florida offensive player of the year after rushing for 2,267 yards and 32 touchdowns as a running back at Manatee High School.
