Childs doesn't mind juggling act just as long he's on playing field

By Derek Samson
Senior Reporter

Clinton Childs spent his spring practices splitting time between I-back and fullback.

Heading into fall, the senior running back has decided which position he prefers — the playing field.

"We haven't decided exactly what I'm going to be doing yet," Childs said. "I'll probably be at fullback most of the time. It doesn't matter to me. I just want to play and want to help the team. I just want to be out there doing whatever it takes to help us get another title."

At Omaha North, Childs rushed for 1,428 yards in 1990 and 1,495 in 1991. His career high school total of 3,947 yards was only 18 yards shy of the Class A rushing record set by former Husker running back Calvin Jones.

The Blue Chip All-American considered only Nebraska, even though he said he knew competition would be tough.

All the I-backs return from 1994, and Cory Schlesinger is the only fullback gone from a backfield that rushed for 340 yards a game.

Childs, a senior, will battle senior Jeff Makovicka for playing time at fullback.

"There's going to be the competition anywhere you go," Childs said. "I liked the competition here because it's some of the best. By moving to fullback, I'm not backing away from any competition. I think it will just add another dimension to our offense."

After sitting out the 1992 season, Childs rushed for 96 yards as a sophomore. Last year, he split time with Damon Benning behind Lawrence Phillips, and totaled 399 yards and five touchdowns.

At 6-feet, 215 pounds, Childs said he didn't plan to change his punishing running style.

"That's always going to be my style of running, whether I'm playing fullback or I-back," Childs said. "I'll never quit running like that. I guess that had a lot to do with why the coaches thought I could switch to fullback."

Osborne said he expected to use Childs' experience in a position filled with depth and youth.

Childs said juggling two positions hadn't been difficult, but he wasn't completely familiar with fullback yet.

"I have I-back down pat right now, but I need to put the finishing touches on fullback," Childs said. "But I'm getting fullback down pretty good, too. Overall, it's going to help me out the most. Hopefully, playing fullback will help out the team as much as it's going to help me out."
