Huskers a hit with young players

By Todd Walkenhorst
 Staff Reporter

The Nebraska soccer team may have faced its toughest challenge of the season last night, trying to keep 150 children entertained.

Elementary school soccer players participated in the first annual "Meet and Beat" the Huskers clinic.

Assistant coach Megan Bechtold said the kids participated in different stations that emphasized a particular soccer skill.

"We have little competitions set up at six stations," Bechtold said. "We tried to incorporate everything they do in soccer."

The individual stations included five-on-five competition, shooting on goal and heading. Husker soccer players were on hand to participate with the clinic participants.

Ten-year-old Mallory Carter said her coach dragged her team out to the complex. But she said she would be back again next year.

"Our coach called us a couple of hours ago and asked us if we wanted to go," Carter said. "It's pretty cool."

Glynnia Ridge, a fifth grader from Prescott Elementary said she had no problem scoring a goal against the Husker goalie.

"We scored a goal over there," Ridge said. "I don't think she just let us score on her."

Ridge said that she would be in attendance for many of Nebraska's home contests this year.

"I'm going to get a season pass, so I can go to all of the games," she said. "We love soccer."

Cassie Willis also enjoyed the clinic and the chance to meet the Huskers.

"This is cool," Willis said, "meeting the Huskers is really cool."

In addition to the instruction, free pizza and pop were served to the participants.

"They're having a blast," Bechtold said. "A lot of them have forgotten about the pizza."

All of the Huskers participated in the activities.

"Everyone had a real open-minded attitude," Bechtold said. "It was our chance to give back a little to the community, and hopefully they will come out to the games."

Huskers to scrimmage for final time

From Staff Reports

The Nebraska football team will hold its third and final full-contact preseason scrimmage today before playing at Oklahoma State on Aug. 31.

Coach Tom Osborne said the scrimmage would be 85 plays and would pit the top offensive unit against the top defensive unit for 1/3 of the plays.

The rest of the scrimmage will be used to let scout teams simulate Oklahoma State's offensive and defensive schemes.

Osborne reported three significant injuries Tuesday. Tight end Mark Gilman strained a knee, and wingback Jon Vedral and rush end Grant Wistrom suffered pulled groins.

Osborne said he wasn't too worried by the injuries.

"They are nothing that I can see that will carry on for too long."

Also on Tuesday, a new Nebraska depth chart was released with a few major changes since the end of spring. Sophomore running back James Sims has moved from the fifth spot to the third spot at I-back. Freshman Ahman Green is listed at the fourth spot.

Mike Fullman, a 5-foot-7, 160-pound junior transfer from Rutgers, has moved up to No. 2 on the depth chart at right cornerback.
