Huan Nguyen, an Eggroll Palace manager, eats lunch outside the restaurant in the Reunion. Nguyen, whose mother owns the restaurant, said he didn't know where they would go after the restaurant closes.

Future of Reunion shops unsure

By Doug Kerns
Staff Reporter

Only two businesses remain in the Reunion, once filled with shops, restaurants and student customers.

Of those two, George's Great Gyros will leave this month, but the manager of the Eggroll Palace said the restaurant had almost a year left on its lease and no plans to leave.

What will happen to the building is still uncertain.

David Hunter, the building's owner, said he could not comment on the building's status, but he expected to announce after Labor Day what will happen to the building. Hunter is president of State Title Services and a partner in Hunter and Hardy Building Corporation.

The building at 905 N. 16th St. once housed other local businesses such as The Plump Tomato Pizza Company, Hair Tech Salon and Spellbound Books and Games.

Those businesses had to leave the Reunion when their leases expired.

Huan Nguyen, manager of Eggroll Palace, said he didn't expect to leave the Reunion until next summer.

"If they are going to keep the building open, they might as well let me stay."

GEORGE KHOLOUSI
owner of George's Great Gyros

Nguyen's mother, Quynh Nguyen, owns the restaurant.

"We don't have to leave," Huan Nguyen said. "I have a year lease until July '96."

George's Great Gyros' lease expires at the end of August. Though most of the other businesses have left, owner George Kholousi said his business was doing well.

"If they are going to keep the building open," Kholousi said, "they might as well let me stay."

Kitty Fynbu, owner of Hair Tech Salon, said she had no time to prepare to leave the building.

"There was no goodwill there at all," Fynbu said, "and that's what's really frustrating — that he (Hunter) couldn't be up front and let us know what was going on so that we could prepare instead of having to scramble."

Hair Tech has moved to 318 S. 13th St. across from the Cornhusker Hotel, and Fynbu said she was happy with the move.

"I think it will be better than what the Reunion was because we've got a storefront, a lot of business traffic coming by," she said, "and it's still convenient for students."

Other businesses such as Spellbound Books and Games haven't had as much luck relocating.

"Everything I've tried so far has fallen through," owner Nate Watt said.

Watt said he hoped to open a business with enough space to accommodate gamers, who are people who play role-playing and trading card games. Gaming enthusiasts still use the Reunion food court to play, he said.

Like Fynbu, Watt said he was unhappy with the manner in which he had to leave the Reunion.

"It was all legal," he said, "but it was very inconvenient."

Murdock Trail meeting scheduled for tonight

By Kacey Kerber
Staff Reporter

The Lincoln Parks and Recreation Department will hold a public information meeting on the construction of the Murdock Trail tonight at 7 at the Anderson Branch Library, 3635 Touzalin Ave.

The Lincoln City Council recently approved construction of the trail, which will run from 48th and Fremont streets to 112th Street. Developer David H. Murdock donated the land for the trail last year.

Robert Wright, assistant superintendent of planning and construction for the Parks and Recreation Department, said he hoped the trail would be completed from 48th to 84th streets by this spring.

The Murdock Trail will have both concrete and limestone chip surfaces for bicyclists, in-line skaters, walkers, runners and others.

The trail also will be connected to other recreational trails in Lincoln. For example, the Murdock Trail at 84th Street will be connected with the John Dietrich Bikeway at 48th Street.

"We will make a loophole between this and other existing trails in Lincoln," Wright said.

After 20 years, library dome gets repairs

By Emily Wray
Staff Reporter

Love Library South is receiving a facelift this semester.

Richard Hoback, a maintenance manager for Facilities Management, said the building's slate roof and cupola were being repaired.

The cupola, or dome, on top of the building is surrounded by 5 1/2 stories of scaffolding while workers repair it, Hoback said. The much-needed repair work began in early July, he said.

The cupola has been struck by lightning three times in 20 years, he said, and has never been repaired during that time.

Workers will replace and repaint rotted wood and railings, he said. The copper covering the cupola also will be replaced.

The work should be finished by the end of August, he said.

Hoback said 90 percent of the $89,000 repair bill would be paid for by the Legislature's Task Force for Building Renewal for Deferred Maintenance. The university will pay for the rest of the project, he said.

Love Library South was built in 1942 at a cost of $882,000.

Rural health fair offers opportunities for medical students

By Tony Michalski
Staff Reporter

Students interested in the medical field who want to work in a rural community can get advice at a fair Friday presented by the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

The fair will be held in the Outpatient Care Center Atrium at 44th and Emile streets in Omaha from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Marge Adey, fair coordinator, said students could meet medical workers from rural Nebraska.

"The fair provides an excellent opportunity for communities to meet and talk with students about the benefits and advantages of a rural practice," Adey said.

The fair is geared toward rural Nebraska communities, said

Brenda Jeter of the Center for Continuing Studies at UNMC.

"We cater to the Nebraska communities first," Jeter said.

But Sherry Cherek of UNMC's Center for Continuing Education said the fair wasn't strictly business.

"We try to get the health care professionals and the students together to meet and talk in an informal manner," Cherek said.
