ment. Beck, who has coached McEwen for two years, did not speak to reporters after the arraignment.

"It has been extremely hard on her, but she is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances," Beck said Tuesday in a statement. "We will do everything possible to help her recover. I fully support coach Osborne's immediate action in dismissing Lawrence Phillips."

Phillips, a junior sociology major, still is enrolled in classes, Anderson said Tuesday.

"It's been very difficult for him," Anderson said. "There has been a lot of pressure on the young man. He is that, a young man. He is not a seasoned adult like some of us."

Phillips occasionally smiled but did not speak with reporters gathered at the arraignment.

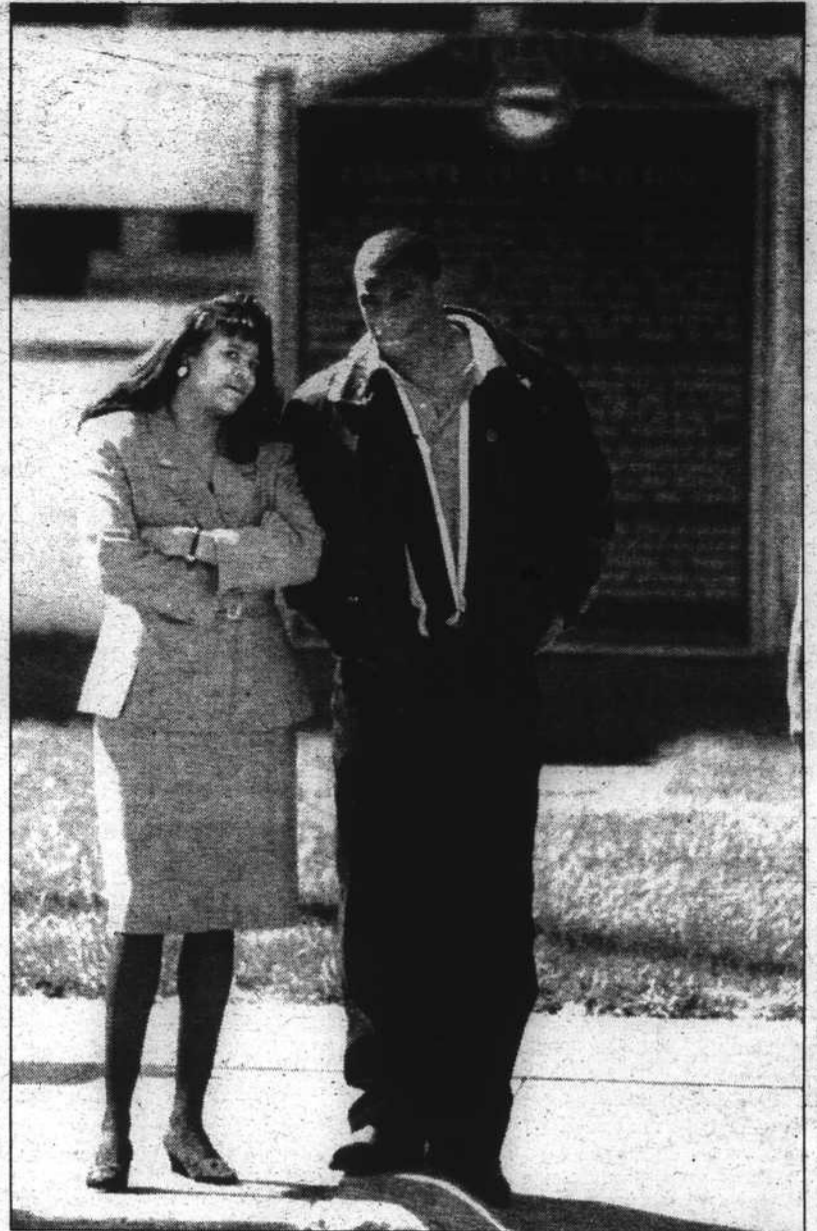

"He wants to be playing football," his attorney told reporters outside the County-City Building. "He doesn't like not playing football."

Lacey said he spoke with McEwen's parents Tuesday, and would be meeting with her this week. He said even if McEwen decided not to file charges, his office will prosecute.

"That's our policy in domestic violence cases," Lacey said. "It's not their choice. It's my choice."

A woman who answered the telephone Tuesday at McEwen's parents' home in Topeka, Kan., declined to answer questions from a Daily Nebraskan reporter.

"They're concerned about the safety of their daughter. That's paramount and first in their minds," Lacey said. "I've assured them that we'll do everything in our power to make sure that if he (Phillips) violates any condition of the bond we will bring him back to court and set a bond that he can't make."

Homecoming includes a carnival

Homecoming organizers hope a carnival will encourage more student and city involvement in the celebration, said a homecoming committee member.

"The Lincoln community hasn't been involved like they used to be," said senior biological science major Matt Klemke.

In addition to lawn displays constructed by sororities, fraternities and campus organizations, community members can have booths at the carnival.

The carnival will be held the Friday afternoon of homecoming week on the green space north of Nebraska Union, he said. Homecoming week is Oct. 15 to Oct. 21.

Each sorority and fraternity will have their own lawn displays this year. In the past, triads—groups of three to four fraternities and sororities—would build a display together, Klemke said.

The greek organizations that are not on City Campus are encouraged to have a booth at the carnival, he said.

The lawn displays and the carnival booths will have to incorporate the homecoming theme, "We're here, we're staying." The university "one" logo is included in the theme.

Organizations can have a booth at the carnival by picking up an applica-

The carnival could become an annual homecoming event if it goes over well, Klemke said.

"We'll see how it goes," he said, "and if it goes well, it will be a thing to stay."
