UNMC offers cancer program free to public

By Amy Abeln

Staff Reporter

The University of Nebraska Medical Center is now offering free medical school.

Sort of.

UNMC's Eppley Institute for Research in Cancer & Allied Diseases is offering a free mini-medical school on cancer.

The school will offer this free six-week program to the public starting next week. Students will listen to and talk with cancer specialists about cell structure, cancer prevention and diagnosis.

Jennifer Cook, a UNMC spokeswoman, said the program would give the public a chance to learn vital information.

"There will be a broad spectrum of presentations for people to learn almost everything they ever wanted to know about cancer," Cook said.

"There will be a time for questions and answers at the end of each class and materials to take with you."

The series will be held at the UNMC College of Nursing in Cooper Auditorium. It will run Sept. 20 to Oct. 25 on Wednesdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

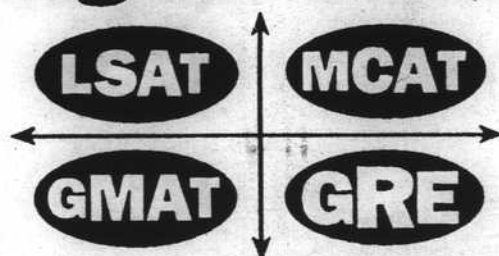

Diplomas will be presented on graduation night. Seating is limited and registration is encouraged but not required. To register, call UNMC at 559-4353. Free parking will be available.

Festival spirit strengthens unity

By Doug Kerns
Staff Reporter

It's a celebration of culture and spirit.

The Hispanic Heritage Festival begins Saturday at 10 a.m. in Agricultural Hall on the Nebraska State Fairgrounds.

"It's a showcase for everyone to come and see the Latino sounds, Latino sights, and Latino colors," said Eliot Rivas, festival chairperson, "and to experience it in a family-oriented atmosphere."

Ethnic foods served at the festival would vary from Mexican to Chilean, Phillipino and El Salvadoran cuisines, he said.

Scheduled events Saturday include:

— A presentation of the Hispanic Community Center by Nebraska Lt. Gov. Kim Robak, State Sen. Kate Witek and Lincoln Mayor Mike Johanns, among others, at noon.

— Dancing by the Capital City Cloggers at 3:15 p.m.

— A jalapeno pepper-eating contest at 4:55 p.m.

— A performance by the band

Mariachi Zapata de Omaha at 6 p.m.

— A dance at 9 p.m. featuring two bands with Latino flavor: Mambo X, a Kansas City salsa/merengue act and Futuro, a tex-mex/ranchera band.

The bands will alternate half-hour sets for four hours.

The festival is sponsored by the Hispanic Community Center. A canned food or $1 donation is suggested per person.
