

Leadership program to get students involved

By Tonya Cross
Staff Reporter

A new mentoring program puts a new twist on follow the leader.

Advance Leaders Connecting With Leaders lets first-year students interact with mentors to develop leadership skills.

"Students are defining the program," said Sherrie Helvie, the program's graduate adviser.

About 25 new students and about 25 mentors will participate in the eight-week program. Each new member will be paired with a mentor, who shares his or her interests.

"It's really not a seminar," Helvie said. "This is a very interactive program."

The first meeting will be Oct. 4 in the Nebraska Union from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Mick Messman, senior coordinating adviser, said the program's goal was to find incoming freshmen who were not involved in high school and try to involve them in campus activities.

Weekly speakers will talk about their lives and the challenges they have experienced.

The members then will discuss a different aspect of leadership or involvement based on the speaker's comments.

Helvie said the emphasis of the program was to broaden students' activity levels and set up relationships with older students.

The mentors will be selected based on their previous experiences, said Marilyn Bugenhagen, director of Student Involvement.

"If upperclassmen want to get involved, we'll try to find a place or create an experience for them,"

Bugenhagen said. "We want a mix of students."

Students interested in participating in the program can pick up an application at the City Campus Student Involvement office at 200 Nebraska Union or at 300 East Campus Union.

All applications must be completed and returned to the City Campus office by 4 p.m. Monday.
