Career Fair '95 under way today

By Cory Waltemath
Staff Reporter

Those wanting to get their career started on the right foot can take the first step today.

Career Fair '95 will take place in the Bob Devaney Sports Center from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. More than 1,200 people are expected to attend. Everyone is welcome.

Representatives from more than 60 graduate schools and 95 state and national corporations will be at the fair.

Turnout at this year's career fair is expected to exceed last year's fair, Geri Cotter, the fair coordinator, said.

Cotter said the increase in participants showed an upswing in the economy because more companies were recruiting college students.

The career fair this year includes many types of colleges, ranging from the University of Nebraska at Kearney to Columbia University. All 17 of the graduate schools in Nebraska also will attend the fair.

Those planning to attend the career fair should bring resumes. Many employers will accept resumes and hand out business cards.

People also will be available to critique resumes and offer advice on how to dress for an interview.

The schedule for Career Fair '95 is:
● 9 to 10 a.m. Workshop for graduate and professional school application and admission.

● 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Interviewing fashion seminar with Husker coaches and a panel of employers and graduate school representatives.

Throughout the day, participants can meet with representatives of graduate and professional schools, use career help tables, have resumes critiqued and win prizes.

The fair is sponsored by the College Placement Association of Nebraska, KFRX Radio and the UNL Graduate Studies office.

New research building adds quality space

From Staff Reports

A new building for agricultural education will be dedicated today at the University of Nebraska Agriculture Research and Development Center near Mead.

Daniel Duncan, director of the center, said the 23,000 square-foot Research and Education Building would house a variety of meeting rooms, a 150-seat auditorium, an exhibition hall and an outdoor amphitheater. It also will feature office and laboratory space, he said.

Funding for the $2.89 million project was secured through cigarette tax money, he said. The project was proposed 15 years ago by then-director Warren Sabs because a quality place to have meetings was needed, Duncan said.

Previous meetings took place in a building that dated back to the 1940s, he said. The building's utilities had deteriorated to the point meetings no longer could be held there, he said.

Since opening April 1, it already has accommodated 9,000 people for meetings and other events, Duncan said.

"That's about double over what we had last year," he said.

Though construction ended in mid-May, other projects are still being planned. Those projects include landscaping and a four-mile educational trail system.
