

Walk sheds light on safety

Taking a midnight stroll on campus will be a little safer after Thursday's Campus Safety Walk.

The Campus Safety Committee, Parking Advisory Committee and Police Advisory Committee sponsor the walk twice a year to identify safety problems on City and East campuses, said Joan Konecky, chairwoman of the Parking Advisory Committee.

Common problems on campus usually are nothing more than burnt-out lights and overgrown shrubbery, Konecky said. For example, the walkers discovered that several parking lots, especially commuter lots, had broken light bulbs.

Twenty-eight people attended this semester's walk. Most were faculty members on the three committees, but interested students also showed up.

"I do feel safe, but you can always feel safer," said Jen Moore, a sophomore English major.

Erin Nielsen, an undeclared sophomore and Neihardt student assistant, said she planned the walk as a floor program. Nielsen said she received information on the walk in her bigred e-mail account, as did all students with bigred accounts.

"If it's not too late at night, there's plenty of activity on campus, but I still recommend the Campus Escort Service to my floor," Nielsen said.

Members of the Campus Escort

Service also went on the walk, and some wrote down problem areas they saw along the way.

"Everything should be translucent with halogen lamps," joked Michael Valerien, a senior philosophy and psychology major and campus escort.

Problems discovered on the walk should be fixed in a few days, Konecky said, but more expensive problems would have to be approved through the chancellor's office. Unsafe areas will be brought to the attention of the landscaping and maintenance offices.

The spring walk will be at 3 a.m., when lights from the baseball field and buildings are shut off, to see how campus is affected by different lighting, Konecky said.

Pass/No Pass ends today

By Tasha E. Keltér
Staff Reporter

Today is the last day for a student to change a class to Pass/No Pass.

All transactions must be made by 6:30 this evening, when NRoll closes.

Pass/No Pass allows students to pass the class by getting a C or better.

If they get anything below a C, they do not pass the class; however, neither mark has any effect on the student's grade point average.

The only exceptions to the deadline are "extreme circumstances" such as a death in the family, said an Office of Registration and Records spokeswoman.

If students without such circumstances want to change a class to Pass/No Pass after this evening, they must appeal to the Academic Senate grading committee.

To change a class to Pass/No Pass today, a student should call NRoll at 472-7272 and select transaction code No. 6.

Students who have lost their four-digit personal identification numbers, which are required for any NRoll transaction, may call 472-3626.
