Players return to practice

From Staff Reports

Nebraska I-back Ahman Green did not practice Monday because of a sprained ankle, while fellow I-back Damon Benning injured his hamstring. Also, five days after undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery, defensive tackle Scott Saltsman returned to practice.

"It's rare to see someone return five days after having surgery like that," Osborne said. "He may be available for the game."

Backup quarterback Brook Berringer participated in the entire practice.

"It's a relief to have him available," Osborne said. "He's close to full speed."

chance to play again, a chance to win and feel better about ourselves."

But in the next 12 minutes, Colorado scored 23 unanswered points and gained 191 yards for the win.

With the Cyclones behind them, the Buffaloes can concentrate on Nebraska now, Russell said.

"We're just going to prepare for a great football team and go out and play as well as Colorado knows how to play," Russell said. "But we're not going to kill each other."

Former Colorado coach Bill McCartney said Nebraska was Colorado's biggest rival, but that's not so this year. Now it's up to Russell to tell the younger players how important the game is.

"We've got to get them to understand (that) this game is a major game if not the game of our entire season," Russell said. "We're going to go and get the young guys excited to play them, and they're going to find out what Big Red Week is."

Young

we didn't vote on it. We just knew that's what they'd probably rather do."

But those extra players may not get a chance to perform because Young said he expected the game with the seventh-ranked Buffaloes to be the Huskers' stiffest challenge this season.

"This game this week is another big game in our season and a very pivotal game," Young said. "There will be a lot of media hype."

"We expect the game to go four quarters," Young said. "It's going to be a tough ballgame. It's a very difficult place to play. There's a lot of noise. We're ready for the big crowd, and it's a tough place to audible."

Despite the hostile environment, Young said, the Huskers won't change any aspect of their game plan from their previous seven wins. But he said there would be a few new wrinkles in the Huskers' top-ranked rushing offense.

"We're pleased with where we're at," Young said. "We're pleased to be ranked where we are at. We are certainly in the driver's seat for another national championship. So if everything goes the way we hope, we hope to be back there."
