Officials enjoy season of plenty

By Ted Taylor

Don't ask Ron Burke to pass the turkey this Thanksgiving. He's not having any.

The only meat that UNL's director of housing food service will taste Thursday will be from a can of stew.

"My Thanksgiving meals will consist of a Sausage and Egg McMuffin, Dinty Moore beef stew and macaroni and cheese," said Burke, whose family will be visiting relatives in Minnesota.

"My wife picked up things she knew I couldn't screw up," said the man in charge of feeding thousands of residence hall students.

Other campus and local officials will dine on more traditional fare.

Gov. Ben Nelson will host a group of 30 family and friends at his mansion Thursday, but he won't spend the day over a hot stove. Mansion chef Henri Opp will do the dirty work.

Their meal will include homemade whipped cream and a turkey donated by the Nebraska Turkey Federation and state poultry producers.

Nelson's press secretary, Dara Troutman, said the only variety of pie to be served would be pumpkin, "so he'd better like it."

"My wife will be doing all the cooking, though. I'm not much of a cook, and she's very good with turkey."

ROBERT ALLEN

NU Regent

versity of Nebraska President Shawntell Hurtgen will have turkey, of course, and ham in her hometown of Sioux Falls, S.D. But the Hurtgen table also will feature a few Syrian dishes such as grape leaves wrapped around rice and meat and a tabouli salad.

"And there will be olives all over the place," she said. "You know how fattening those are."

Interim Chancellor Joan Leitzel will serve turkey and traditional fixins' to relatives from Indiana and Ohio.

"Thanksgiving meals generally aren't too gourmet," she said. "It won't be a big Betty Crocker thing."

Although pumpkin pie will be one of the choices available, Leitzel considers her apple pie to be the best.

Mayor Mike Johanns will travel to Elkhart, Ind., to visit his mother-in-law.

"It's just turkey with all the trimings," he said (about the planned meal, not his in-laws).

Will Johanns don an apron?

"Oh yes, I'll do the carving."

Speaking of kitchen masters, NU Athletic Director Bill Byrne said he's done all the cooking at his house for the past six years.

He plans to barbecue his bird in the backyard Thursday to feed eight hungry people. In a bold move, Byrne will not offer his guests pumpkin pie.

"Cherry and lemon meringue pies," he said. "Nope, no pumpkin."

NU Regent Robert Allen of Hastings won't follow Byrne's example.

"My wife will be doing all the cooking, though," he said. "I'm not much of a cook, and she's very good with turkey."

"She's a better cook than she realizes, but, then again, most American women are good cooks."

Argument over car keys leads to stabbing

By Jeff Zeleny
Senior Reporter

A Lincoln woman was arrested Sunday night on two felony counts in connection with the stabbing of her boyfriend, police said.

Susan Coonrod, 42, was arrested on suspicion of second-degree assault and use of a weapon to commit a felony. Police allege Coonrod and her boyfriend were arguing over a set of car keys when she stabbed him with a steak knife.

Police arrested Coonrod at 1112 S. 33rd St. The boyfriend, Brent Koster, 33, was treated and released from Lincoln General Hospital.

NARCOTICS

Two students who live on the 10th floor of Harper Residence Hall were cited Sunday on suspicion of possessing less than one ounce of marijuana, UNL police said.

Roommates Cory White and Jason O'Connor were contacted by university police in their room about 7 p.m. Sunday, said Sgt. Mylo Bushing. O'Connor also was cited on suspicion of possessing drug paraphernalia.

The narcotics charges are infractions and carry penalties similar to a speeding ticket. Police say more students have been arrested on marijuana possession charges this year than in four previous years.

White and O'Connor are University of Nebraska-Lincoln freshmen.

Old phone books recyclable

New Lincoln phone books are out, and Dale Ekart wants everybody to know that the old ones can be easily recycled.

The phone books should be distributed some time this week, said Ekart, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's recycling coordinator.

Students living in the residence halls can trade their old local phone books for new ones at the front desks.

Office workers and students who live off campus are encouraged to deposit their phone books in the office paper recycling bins Dec. 7-8, when the recycling office will be picking them up. On those days, Ekart would like people to put only telephone books — not office paper — in the bins.

"We will recycle as many as we can," Ekart said.
