Fan sinks shots during timeout in women's game to win $15,000

By Antone Oseka
Staff Reporter

Most fans go to the Bob Devaney Sports Center to see a Nebraska basketball game, but Ed Thompson got to take part in the game.

But Thompson did not play for either team on Tuesday night; he just went to see his girlfriend play and maybe win a little cash.

As the Cornhusker women's basketball team defeated Sam Houston State 88-65, Thompson sat speechless during most of the second half.

He was the lucky fan chosen to participate in the Martha Gooch timeout shot worth $15,000. He had to sink a free throw and a half-court shot in fewer than 30 seconds. Thompson did it with 10 seconds to spare.

"I don't know what I'll do with the money," he said.

Thompson had to endure a little anguish along the way, though. As he watched his girlfriend, sophomore guard Jami Kubik, play during the second half, Thompson was worried. His shot took place during a timeout early in the second half, but it had to be reviewed on videotape after the game to make sure he didn't step over the half-court line before releasing the ball. If Thompson had stepped over the line, he would not have received the money.

"I thought I was short on that one, so I started running for it," he said. "I wasn't sure."

Thompson's friends knew he would make the shot and get the money. He wasn't so sure.

Sheryl Witte, a friend of Thompson's from high school, said, "I knew he would get it; he played basketball in high school, and he was good."

Good is an understatement. Thompson was an all-state athlete in three sports—basketball, football and track—during his senior year at Cambridge High School. He is now a scholarship quarterback at the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Seven NU players named All-Big Eight

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Colorado and Nebraska dominated the Big Eight coaches' all-conference team, with seven players from each school named to the team announced Tuesday.

Nebraska placed four players on the first-team offense, led by quarterback Tommie Frazier and running back Ahman Green. Five Buffaloes were named to the first-team offense, including wide receiver Rae Carruth and kicker Neil Voskeritchian.

The other Huskers named to the first team were offensive linemen Chris Dishman and Eric Anderson, cornerback Tyrone Williams, defensive lineman Christian Peter and rush end Grant Wistrom.

On offense, Colorado center Bryan Stoltenberg was the only repeat selection from last year.

NOTE:

• Nebraska center Aaron Graham has been named one of four Burger King scholar-athletes of the week.

Graham, who anchors the Cornhuskers' offensive line, was recognized because of his academic excellence as an animal science major. He has earned a 3.33 grade point average.

back Danny Wuerffel of Florida and Ohio State running back Eddie George, Frazier said he was better because those players were one-dimensional, while he offers a blend of both passing and running.

"These days you see a lot of guys who can run the ball, but can't really throw the ball, and guys who pass who can't really run," Frazier said. "I think those are both assets of the game."

Also, Frazier said he played against tougher defenses than both George and Wuerffel. Frazier played against two of the top defenses in the country, Colorado and Kansas State.

Frazier kept silent about the Heisman because he thought it was too early to mention it, but lately he had thought about it.

"Early off in the season when my name was mentioned, I tried to shrug it off, and I knew I had a long season ahead of me, and anything can happen within a season," Frazier said. "The last couple of weeks it was in the back of my mind."

If Frazier wins the award, he said he wouldn't brag about it, although he would show it off a little.

"If I do win it, then I can go out and show it off, but right now I'm not that type of person," Frazier said. "It's out of my hands, and all I can do is sit back and wait for the voters to turn in their ballots and wait until Dec. 9 and see who the winner is."

But Frazier still has one matter of business before he leaves Nebraska, regardless of the Heisman outcome.

With the likelihood that Nebraska will play Florida in the Fiesta Bowl, Frazier said the seniors wanted to go out winners and stay national champions.

"We are looking at it like it's the biggest game in Nebraska history," Frazier said. "We've already won one national championship, and now we have the opportunity to win two."

"We don't want to go out losers; we want to go out as the only team in 17 years to win back-to-back championships."

Midway through the season, Weston said, Nepo and Krondak were struggling, which was normal for a freshman. In her first year, Weston had a hitting percentage of .293 and made 90 errors on 638 attacks.

"They are really starting to mature and develop into good players," Weston said. "It's going to be exciting to watch them in the years to come, but as far as I'm concerned I want them to play good this year, and so far they have."

The Huskers' senior leadership—Weston, Winsett and Johnson—has been vital to getting Krondak and Nepo ready.

Weston said when the three seniors were freshmen, they didn't have a group of players to help them set the tone for the future.

Now, that future has come, and Weston wants Nebraska to make the Final Four for the first time since 1990.

"This is the real season, and this is what we've been looking forward to since we stepped on the court back in August," Weston said. "I think everybody realizes what's at stake now, and there is no more freshman, sophomore divisions. Everybody is a player, and that's what it's going to take to take this team a step further."

"We're a great team right now, but we need to be a greater team to win it all."
