Music Reviews

"Toy Story, The Original Soundtrack"
Randy Newman
Walt Disney Records
Grade: A

Randy Newman, best known for his slightly comedic touch in songs such as the '70s hit "Short People," takes a crack at Disney's latest film with "Toy Story."

And he succeeds, creating a lush, warm underscore that perfectly captures the feelings of the film. The highlights of the soundtrack are "You've Got A Friend in Me," "Strange Things" and "I Will Go Sailing No More." These songs are delightful, featuring Newman's gravelly voice and his wonderful melodies and splendid lyrics.

"You've Got A Friend in Me" has an almost New Orleans shuffle, spiked with a little Western flavor. The song "Strange Things" is rock 'n' roll, a phantasmagoria of all the bad things happening to Woody the cowboy as his status as Andy's favorite toy evaporates.

The ballad "I Will Go Sailing No More" is a beautiful song of the dejection and defeat Buzz Lightyear feels when he learns he is a mere toy.

"Toy Story, The Original Soundtrack" is a wonderful CD, filled with all of the joy and humor of the movie. See the movie and get the soundtrack. You won't be disappointed.

"Made in Heaven"
Queen
Hollywood Records
Grade: B+

1991: Freddie Mercury dies of AIDS.

1995: Queen releases a new CD, "Made in Heaven."

Recorded when Mercury was going through the final and most painful stages of the disease, "Made in Heaven" represents Freddie Mercury's final words. Mercury, arguably one of rock's most flamboyant performers, refused to let his personal pain turn "Made in Heaven" into a dreary CD.

Opening with sounds of chirping birds and winding through ballads beaming with joy and appreciation for life, "Made in Heaven" gives an almost childish view of the end.

Put together in the four years since Mercury's death, "Made in Heaven" has no shortage of the classic Queen sound — intricate guitar riffs and gorgeous harmonies with Mercury's voice soaring over everything.

From the very first eye-popping track, "It's a Beautiful Day," to the unlisted jaw-dropping finale, "Made in Heaven" represents the very best of what made Queen so good. This last track, a 22-minute spectacle of twinkles presents what may be the very first rock depiction of the afterlife. And if you listen to Mercury, heaven isn't a bad place to be. Filled with songs about the sanctity of life and the wonder of growing up, "Made in Heaven" is a tremendous album. Unfortunately, it's probably Queen's last, unless there are more unreleased tracks no one knows about.

"Made in Heaven" represents the last words of one of rock's greatest performers before his death. Even though Freddie Mercury may not be with us anymore, his legacy lives on in his music.
