"Those little fellows, it's neat how they just stand there and look. Their eyes just sparkle. A lot of them don't have trees in their homes."

on her holiday display

Decorations aren't limited to the outdoors. This display in Ann Day's front window is only the beginning.

"the lady with all the lights," and lives down." Even after someone stole more than $500 in decorations four years ago, Day didn't falter. At first, she said, she was upset.

It's a winter wonderland of lights. The backyard display is visible from 28th Street, but a more close-up view can be found from the alley running behind the festive home.

"Then I said, 'Well, maybe they need it more than I do ... if it's gonna make a better Christmas for them.'"

The other day, she got something in return. Day was out walking when she met a 6-year-old boy. He was in his yard, alone, with a couple strands of lights — decorating. "I said 'yeah, that's right, that's right.' You don't have to be rich or have everything. It's the spirit. That's amazing."
