Israel declares war on militant group

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel declared all-out war Sunday on the militant Islamic group Hamas after a suicide bomber blew apart a second bus in Jerusalem in just one week.

The blast, which scattered body parts and pieces of twisted metal yards from the explosion site, killed 19 people, including the bomber, and threw the future of Mideast peacemaking into question.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres demanded that Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat do more to combat terrorism. He said if Arafat did not comply, negotiations with the Palestinians on a final peace agreement would not start in May as scheduled.

"There are no negotiations with the Palestinians," a grim Peres said at a news conference. "There are only our demands to the Palestinians."

Israel is "engaged in total war against Hamas and other terrorist organizations," said Peres, a dove who will be hard-pressed to prevail over a right-wing rival in May 29 elections.

Arafat condemned the bombing as a "serious and dangerous terrorist act" and outlawed all armed Palestinian groups. The Hamas offshoot that claimed responsibility announced a three-month moratorium on attacks so long as Israel does not crack down on Hamas.

The blast tore through a No. 18 city

"The Palestinian Authority has decided ... to ban all activities of all terrorist groups working to torpedo the national goal."

bus as it drove through Jerusalem's shopping district at 6:25 a.m., almost exactly a week after another No. 18 bus exploded in the city, killing the bomber and 26 others. Hamas claimed that attack and a bombing in Ashkelon the same day that killed two people, including the bomber.

"Bodies were strewn all over the place," Ariel Schussheim, a paramedic, told the Yediot Ahronot newspaper. "We had to push through the corpses to treat the wounded."

Hundreds of angry Israelis gathered at the scene. Some lit memorial candles and recited prayers. Others sobbed and shouted in fury.

About a dozen religious Jews swayed back and forth in prayer. Others tied black cloths to traffic lights.

When Peres visited the site, surrounded by dozens of police guards, he was booed by demonstrators who shouted "Peres go home," and "Death to the Arabs."

In an address to his people Sunday night on Palestinian TV, Arafat denounced "the conspirators acting against our people ... through these shameful terrorist operations."

"The Palestinian Authority has decided with the confidence and support of its people to ban all activities of all terrorist groups working to torpedo the national goal," he said.

Hamas sources said Sunday that 300 Islamic activists had been arrested by Arafat's forces in the week since the previous bombings.

President Ezer Weizman urged Peres to suspend talks with the Palestinians. Opposition leader Benjamin Netanyahu, declaring a political truce for the time being, proposed deporting ringleaders and sending Israeli troops into Palestinian-ruled areas.

Instead, Peres warned Arafat that Israel would honor its agreements with the Palestine Liberation Organization only if the Palestinians did the same.

Dole holds on as candidates scramble for GOP baton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole's big South Carolina victory brought no instant surrenders in the Republican presidential race. But as Steve Forbes, Pat Buchanan and others battled on Sunday, their words betrayed a sense of inevitability if Dole is not derailed in the GOP's defining week ahead.

With eight primaries Tuesday and another on Thursday in New York, time is on Dole's side; rivals can't campaign everywhere against the revived front-runner, nor is there much time for any new advertising to take hold.

And with so many states in play at once — and a bunch more on the following Tuesday — the establishment support Dole can count on from governors, senators and others should prove an invaluable asset, as it did Saturday in South Carolina.

"Senator Dole has enormous depth across the country," House Speaker Newt Gingrich said in an interview. And there's more to come: Texas Gov. George W. Bush could endorse Dole as early as Wednesday, providing a boost for that state's giant March 12 primary.

The fact that Gingrich talked about the presidential race at all, while Bush moved toward backing a candidate, was vivid proof of how South Carolina had changed the nomination calculus.

Dole was knocked from his place as front-runner two weeks ago in New Hampshire by rebel conservative Buchanan, who then lost the baton, along with Delaware and Arizona, to flat-tax champion Forbes. It is now back in Dole's grasp, and it might stop changing hands if the Senate majority leader can hold it through the bruising challenges this week in Georgia, New York and elsewhere.

"If he has the kind of week he is capable of, at that point it becomes his to lose," said Gingrich, who said he wasn't endorsing Dole but was eager for the party to settle an often abrasive nominating contest.

He urged everyone but Buchanan and Forbes to give up challenging Dole,

"so we can have a nominee by the middle of March and begin the work of uniting the party." It was a blunt message just before the primary in Georgia, Gingrich's home state, where former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander hopes for a breakthrough but was running third.

Alexander balked at Gingrich's advice. After South Carolina, he said, "the issue will shift from Buchanan to Dole and the question will be is Bob Dole who we really want to run against Bill Clinton?"

But as more states weigh in, it is getting tougher for candidates who keep losing to Dole to make the case they are stronger contenders.

Even as Buchanan vowed to contest Georgia by challenging Dole's cultural conservatism, he was thinking ahead to the GOP convention in San Diego. He warned that his supporters would abandon the Republican Party if a Dole-led ticket changed the anti-abortion platform plank.

Police take Keyes into custody before debate

ATLANTA - Presidential candidate Alan Keyes was taken into custody briefly by police Sunday night when he attempted to enter a television studio where other contenders for the Republican presidential nomination were preparing to debate.

Lee Armstrong, director of programming and creative services, said the station was "absolutely not" pressing charges.

Keyes apparently was not formally arrested, but he was taken into custody - with his hands restrained behind his back - as he attempted to go in the main entrance of the WSB-TV studios about 30 minutes before the debate began.

"I have a right to speak," Keyes shouted as police hustled him away in handcuffs.

He showed up later in the evening for a live interview on a rival television station, WAGA.

Keyes said one officer told him he was under arrest and that he was driven around for about 20 minutes before being told he was free to go at a parking lot near a city hall annex. He said he would consider suing WSB-TV and try to get its license lifted.

Throughout the day, Keyes and a band of supporters had staged an "extended fast" in five pup tents set up on the studio's front lawn.

Keyes also was denied participation in a South Carolina debate last week that was limited to the top four finishers in the New Hampshire primary.

He told reporters outside the building Sunday that he was denied entry by WSB-TV officials.

"I was invited to participate in this debate and the owners of the TV station denied me," said Keyes. "I am qualified as a candidate in the state of Georgia. No media outlet has the right to choose (who can debate)."

"We never had any intention of reconsidering," the decision not to invite Keyes, said Bill Nigut, WSB-TV political reporter and a debate panelist.

The debate among Pat Buchanan, Steve Forbes and Lamar Alexander, started as scheduled shortly after the Keyes incident.
