A LOOK AT CRIME ON CAMPUS AND IN THE COMMUNITY

ASSAULT/SHOOTING

Lincoln police have not made any arrests in an assault and shooting at a party Friday night.

Police were on the 500 block of North 27th Street on a separate disturbance call when they saw a crowd leaving the location of the party. Crowd members told police that shots had been fired at the party. No one was hit. Yosha Brown, 21, told police she was assaulted at the party by several women. She sustained a number of cuts and bruises from the fight. Police found .38-caliber shell casings at the scene but no weapons.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

A Lincoln man was found dead in his car Sunday as a result of suspected carbon monoxide poisoning.

Manuel Rodriguez, 31, had been missing since Wednesday, said Lincoln police Sgt. Anne Heermann.

Police believe that Rodriguez could not enter his apartment on the 1900 block of Q Street and fell asleep in his car, which was running inside his garage.

John Colborn, deputy county attorney, said he thought Rodriguez probably died of carbon monoxide poisoning from car exhaust.

Recycle

extra money was used to expand the program.

About a month ago, he said, the recycling office produced a video explaining the work the program does, with the extra money gained.

"We've added more containers and use more promotional efforts," he said. One reason the program is efficient, Ekart said, is that students do most of the work. "That helps keep cost down," he said. "They're filthy rich when they're done."

The program also works efficiently, Ekart said, because other areas of campus, such as landscape services, help. Don Hinds, manager of operations at landscape services, said he was pleased with the recycling efforts.

Two people from landscape services drive trucks and pick up trash and recyclables, such as cardboard, he said.

"I'm pleased with it," Hinds said. "It's diverting a lot of recyclables from landfills."

Sometimes, Hinds said, the trucks were slowed down by having to stop at the same place twice to pick up recyclables.

"It's not saving us too much time," he said. "We have to go back for more cardboard and trash."

But Ekart said he was happy with the program and hoped it would continue to grow.

"I'm overjoyed that it has grown and progressed as quickly as it did," Ekart said. "When we first started, we were concerned about how quickly we could put together a complete program."

Merger

since I've been here," said Witck, who has been in the Legislature for four years.

Heidi Ore of the State Foster Care Review Board said that her agency opposed the proposal because it had seen negative impacts on service in similar legislation other states have passed.

"Our concern is that in those states, service delivery gets worse, costs increase and accountability also decreases," she said.

The board may have supported the bill, Ore said, if it had contained more details on how the merger would affect foster care service delivery in the state.

She echoed Witck's assessment that LB1044 was more of a concept than solid legislation.

"And it's been our experience that other intent legislation oftentimes leads to more confusion than benefits," she said.

Witek said the way the bill read, the agencies would not have to use the Legislature for guidance.

"They don't want to have to come back to the Legislature," she said. "They (agency directors) want to make decisions on the outside."

Battle Creek Sen. Leland Klein, who announced LB1044 as his priority bill, said it would keep recipients from falling through cracks.

He agreed that the proposal was in its early stages, but said it built a foundation for the future.

"You have to start with a concept before you do anything," he said.
