

SNORTS

Monday, April 1, 1996

Page 16

SPORTS OPINION

Gordon Summers

Knee, Ozzy Petthis all stay, yeah!

I am tired of all those mean columnists giving Dan Knee and his Cornhusler boys such a rough time this year.

Can't everybody see that they are trying hard?

Knee is a great coach. I cheered for him all the way through the 63-game losing streak. Sure, he says dumb stuff sometimes, acts like a jackass and pretends he can't coach a lick. But darnit, I love him, and I don't want to see him go.

Dan, please stay. I know that the Not good enough to get invited to the NCAA Tournament title has all the big-name schools beating down your door. Be a big man, Dan. Don't bail out.

And what's all this talk about some of our Hustlers leaving Lickin' to go to other schools? I don't buy it for a second. Why would they ever want to do such a crazy thing? Cornhusler basketball is great. There is no other place in the country where you can whip up on Helpless State, finish seventh in your league and still have a celebration at the end of the season?

I love Tom Ozzybone. I think the Cornhusler football team is the best ever. I wish they would have played the Dallas Cowboys this year. The Hustlers would have won big.

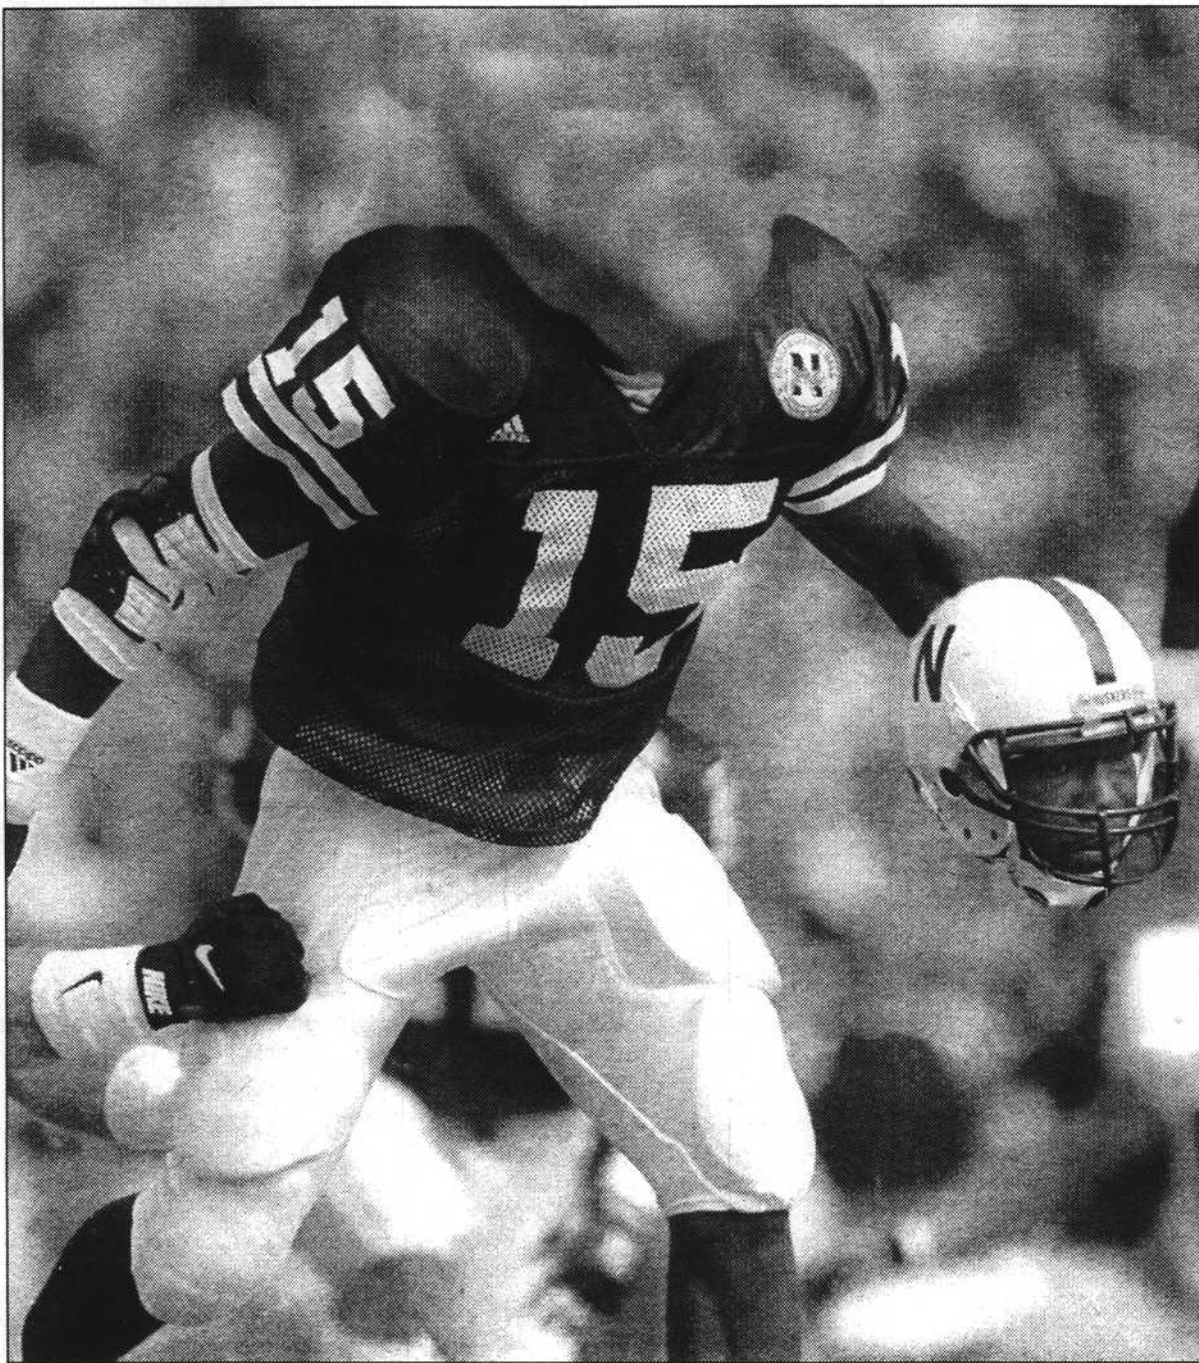

Ozzybone's boys are going to win the national title again this year and next year and the year after. We've got the best players in the world — like Jared Toomuch (by the way, his spell-check name is Jared Tomato. Isn't that just the neatest thing?)

I still can't believe that Tommie Clot didn't win the Highsman Trophy last season. That was such a disgusting injustice.

And how about that Hustler volleyball team? They won the national title, too. I went to two of their matches last season, and I just know the Hustlers were the best college volleyball team ever. Terry Petthis is such a great guy, even though he can be a little grumpy and mean every once in a while. But I love him anyway.

We've got the best university in the world right here in Lickin. Next year, I think every Hustler team is going to win the national title, even the sucky Hustler baseball boys.

Summers is a fun-loving, all-around nice guy and a special contributor to the Daily Harrassment.

Juan Dollar/DH

Former Nebraska quarterback Tommie Clot recently had his head removed in an attempt to stop recent medical problems. The experimental surgery is not expected to hurt Clot's NFL draft status.

Head in hand Clot begins pro career

By Tardy Walkalot
Staff Smartass

Dr. Deepthroat Gagmehard has announced that an experimental amputation of the head has been performed on former Cornhusler quarterback Tommie Clot.

"If we amputate the patient's head," Gagmehard said, "we don't think the clots in the leg will be a problem anymore, but we're a little worried about him dropping in the draft."

Clot's head will be placed on his left hand. This tactic could possibly allow him to become a better quarterback, Gagmehard said. He will now be able to raise his arm into the air in order to see over the top of the offensive line.

National Football League draft expert Hell Sniper, Jr. said Clot's status in the draft was already weak, and the surgery should not affect him.

"He's from Nebraska, right?" Sniper said. "I couldn't give a rat's ass if he threw for 50 touchdowns last year, if he's a Cornhusler, he's worthless. I still can't believe the New Joke Pets wasted a pick on Johnny Missile in 1991."

Nebraska pathetic director Bill Burned said he was concerned about the condition of his quarterback.

"I hope we can get this taken care of before this fall," Burned said. "What do you mean he's out of eligibility?"

Clot said he was a little concerned about the medical procedure, but figured the Hustlers would not lead him into any situation that would be hazardous to his health.

"I'm sure that my health is their main concern, and not how many football games we win," Clot said. "I have

See Clot on next page

Reporters banned from volleyball

By Mister Charmin
Snorts Ejector

Cornhusler volleyball coach Terry Petthis has vowed to ban Daily Harrassment reporters from covering all volleyball practices next fall.

In a move reminiscent of football coach Tom Ozzybone, Petthis, who won his first national title in December, claimed that the DH reporters went "over the edge" by attending a lobster feast with the team while in Amherst, Mass., at the Final Four.

The guilty DH reporters, Mister Charmin, Rovert Skrap and Tardy Walkalot, mysteriously appeared at the team hotel on the evening of Dec. 13. Along with KLEIN's radio-juice boy John Sailor, the three reporters traveled to Chez Josef with Petthis and the team.

Apparently while at the feast, Walkalot embarrassed the entire Hustler party by belching loudly and heaving on the chef. Petthis said the reporters were not invited to the banquet, which honored the Final Four teams on the night before the semifinal matches.

Nebraska Sports Misinformation official K. Gump said he didn't understand how the reporters crashed the team-only event.

"I don't no what's up, y'all," Gump said. "I looked back and those three bozos were on the bus. I tried to scam them out of 35 bucks, but they were a little too quick."

While at the banquet, Charmin, Skrap and Walkalot sat at a table with Humper associate athletic director Barbie Scribner, Sailor, volunteer assistant coach Doug East and some lady from the SEC.

"It was great," Skrap said. "We had 1 1/2 pound lobsters for free and saw Petthis wear a bib. What more could you ask for?"

The coach was not amused. "They nearly destroyed our team

See Petthis on next page

Bliscotti Brewin/DN

Nebraska volleyball coach Terry Petthis, upset by the antics of DH reporters at the Final Four, will not grant any more interviews to the newspaper.