

Action

"Bill Cosby's kids should not be eligible for affirmative action," Duncan said. "White Appalachian coal miners' children should be."

The double standards created in situations such as admissions standards for minorities also create additional racial tension, Duncan said.

But Anna Shavers, associate professor of law, said she knew about affirmative action both because of her legal background and her personal life.

"I live the racial issues," Shavers said.

When she was growing up in Little Rock, Ark., she said she was forced to sit on the back of the bus, drink from separate fountains and take psychological tests to get into "white" schools.

Affirmative action should remain legal because of events like those, she said, and should act as a repayment for injuries incurred.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs James Griesen agreed.

"One who inflicts damages on another unjustly should have to pay for those damages," Griesen said. "I cannot think of anything that deserves more corrective action than what we have done to Native Americans and African Americans."

Universities have a special obligation to recruit minority students and staff, Griesen said. Providing role models for minority students is important.

But using affirmative action doesn't only benefit minorities, Griesen said.

"We need to teach students how to work in a multicultural society," Griesen said. "You can't do that by having an isolated, white wall on campus."

Postal Service honors NU

From Staff Reports

Despite the cancellation of the "Night of Champions" celebration April 19, the Postal Service will still offer commemorative postcards and postmarks.

The celebration last Friday was canceled after former NU quarterback Brook Berringer's death.

Proceeds will go to the Brook Berringer Memorial Fund.

The postcards and postmarks will be available at the Main Post Office in downtown Lincoln from April 29 to May 3, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

They are also available through mail until May 19. Cards are $1 each, and checks should be made out to "Lincoln Postmaster."

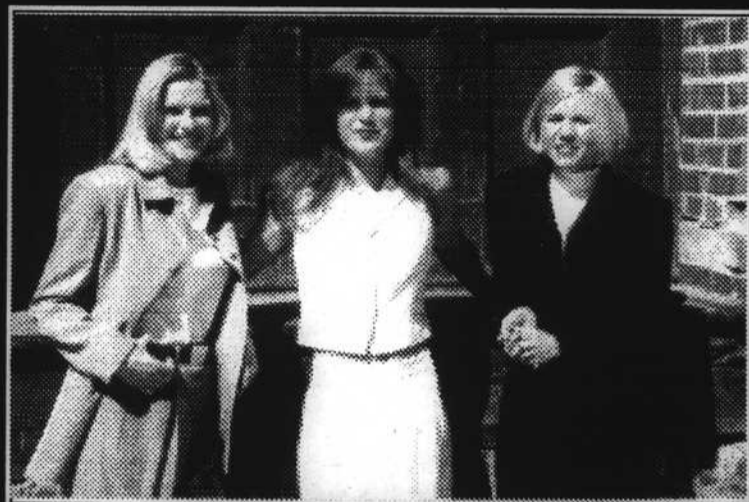

All requests must include a stamped envelope or postcard bearing the proper first-class postage. Requests should specify a preference for volleyball or football.

Requests should be sent to: Night of Champions Station, Postmaster, Lincoln, NE 68501-9804.
