— Al Papik, senior associate athletic director, week of August 21, 1995.

"Students are not sophisticated consumers."
— Regent Drew Miller, on the "separate checks" tuition proposal, week of August 28, 1995.

"Attending our practices is a privilege, not a right. I felt that the cartoons were very inappropriate, and for this reason, the Daily Nebraskan will no longer be welcome at our practices this year."
— Tom Osborne, reacting to two editorial cartoons critical of football players, week of September 4, 1995.

"Lawrence Phillips was involved in an incident early Sunday morning in which he injured a young woman."
— Osborne, week of September 11, 1995.

"Whether you like it or not, we're turning our pages over to a man who has murdered people."

— Arthur Sulzberger Jr., publisher of The New York Times, on the decision to publish the Unabomber's manifesto, week of September 18, 1995.

"I would stand on top of the dome of the library and shout 'Contact your Congressmen and tell them: Don't cut federal aid.'"

— John Beacon, director of scholarships and financial aid, week of September 25, 1995.

"I'm yet another resource-consuming kid in an overpopulated planet, raised to an alarming extent by Madison Avenue and Hollywood, poised with my cynical and alienated peers to take over the world when you're weak and old."

— Calvin, explaining his Halloween "costume," week of October 30, 1995.

"An average citizen in the United States of America can move mountains, as well as the molehills we call members of Congress."

— U.S. Sen. Bob Kerrey, week of October 9, 1995.

"Not guilty."

— Dierdre Robertson, court clerk in the O.J. Simpson trial, week of October 2, 1995.
