

'Torn Notebook' takes to Sheldon

One of this year's much-anticipated additions to the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery, "Torn Notebook," will be unveiled Sept. 6 and is expected to be one of UNL's main attractions this fall.

After three years and close to a million dollars, designers Claes Oldenburg and Coosje van Bruggen will unveil the 22-foot-high sculpture, which resembles a school notebook with pages scattering in the wind.

"The team of artists is internationally famous and known for redefining public monuments in pop art," said

George Neubert, director of the Sheldon.

Neubert said the Sheldon's mission is to bring to UNL some of the finest works of art that are being produced by American artists today.

The Sheldon, at 12th and R streets, is paid for entirely by private dollars and is free to students. Neubert recommended the Sheldon as a great place to take a date.

"The gallery is one of those absolutely incredible resources that is available and one of the best cheap dates," Neubert said. "What can be better than standing in front of a work of art and asking the other person what they see?"

Neubert said that while some students consider the gallery a place to go for classwork, lots of students visit for many other reasons—and not all those students are art majors.

Beginning Sept. 10 and ending Nov. 24, "Human Form: The Photographed Nude," should be an interesting combination of photography and the human body, and would coordinate nicely with Neubert's date recommendation.

From Eadweard Muybridge, a turn-of-the-century photographer, to Robert Mapplethorpe, a controversial contemporary photographer, the historical relationship between the nude body and photography will be explored.

Another noteworthy exhibit, "European Master Sculptors," will feature modernistic sculptors such as Auguste Rodin, Constantin Brancusi, Pablo Picasso and Barbara Hepworth from Nov. 29 through Feb. 9.

Just in time for the new semester, "Princess X," one of the gallery's best-known and most valuable sculptures, will return to the Sheldon.

What I did on my summer vacation

I just reached here three days ago. In Malaysia there is no such thing as spring or summer. The country is always hot and rainy with no seasons. I had a break for two weeks. I went to my home.
