

Honeydogs to bring Lincoln novel sound

By ANN STACK
Music Critic

It's refreshing to find a band of genres who don't sound like it. Tonight the Honeydogs, hailing from Minneapolis, will bring their brand of southern-fried country-rock to The Zoo Bar, 136 N. 14th St.

The quartet formed in 1993 and has already released two albums. Currently supporting their February 1996 release, "Everything, I Bet You," the "dogs are kicking off the Southern leg of their tour in Lincoln tonight.

Their sound is unique to just about anything the Midwest (and the market in general) has to offer these days, and is absolutely likeable. It's very straightforward — rootsy and melancholy, thigh-slapping and raucous. They have all the influences of country, rock and pop, but the Honeydogs defy a label.

"Someone said to me once, 'If the Beatles grew up in Nashville, they'd sound like you,'" drummer Noah Levy said in a phone interview from Minneapolis. "I thought that was really flattering."

Flattery aside, the pop influences are prevalent in the catchy, sing-along choruses of "Your Blue Door," "Over you" and "Kandiyohi." Kandiyohi is a town in Minnesota.

"We drive through there to get to a gig in this God-awful town up north,"

Levy said. The song's actually about someone who's messing around with a married person.

The Honeydogs are comfortable with their mix of musical styles.

"People can run away from their influences all they want to," Levy said. "The Stones were never called country, but they had records with that leaning."

The Honeydogs play in Kansas City Thursday, then have dates in New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Austin, New York, Philadelphia and Canada before wrapping up the tour and recording their next album.

"I hope people walk away (from the show) feeling like they knew us," Levy said. "I want them to say, 'I don't know these people at all, but somehow, I kind of knew what they were thinking.'"

Their opening act is Houndstooth and there is $3 cover charge.
