Three Huskers head home to play ASU was academically ineligible last year. He said he has dedicated this game to his mother, Freeda, who died in January.

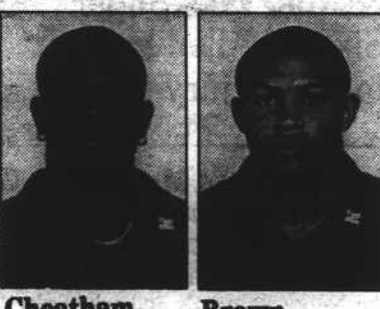

"It's really important for me to do well," said Johnson, who graduated from Alhambra High School in Phoenix.

Cheatham, a split end from Phoenix, said the game in Tempe, Ariz., will motivate him to perform better.

"For me, it will be great to play on that field because I've always wanted to," Cheatham said. "I just want to do well with my family there."

Cheatham missed NU's final seven games last season — including the Fiesta Bowl at Sun Devil Stadium — after separating his shoulder. The 6-foot-4 split end selected Nebraska over Arizona State and UCLA after graduating from South Mountain High School.

Cheatham is listed second on the

Brown, NU's No. 3 left cornerback behind Michael Booker and Mike Fullman, played last year at Saguaro High School in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Brown was one of five true freshmen to play Sept. 7 against Michigan State.

"I'm looking forward to the game because my family and friends from high school are going to be there," Brown said. "With my relatives there, I just want to do the best I can."

1995, just hopes his defense doesn't spot the Cornhuskers a 28-point lead this year.

Nebraska scored 11 seconds into its 77-28 win over ASU last year in Lincoln on a 65-yard run by Clinton Childs. By the end of the first quarter, the Huskers led 35-7, and at the half, NU was up 63-21. But the Sun Devils' 28 points were the most Nebraska surrendered all season.

"We were able to get some big plays on them (last year)," Plummer said. "If we can go and duplicate that performance or be even better on offense, then we can leave it to our defense to play well."

Plummer is looking to improve on last year's 273-yard passing performance against the Huskers.

"We have to go out and score points," he said. "Lots of teams have trouble scoring points against Nebraska. We feel as an offensive unit that we have a lot of weapons and we can move the ball."

Plummer will rely on the protection of his offensive line, led by All-American candidate Juan Roque at left tackle. The ASU line gave up just one sack to the Nebraska defense last year.

For the second straight season, Roque draws the tough assignment of defending Nebraska rush end Grant Wistrom.

"Wistrom played hard," Roque said. "This guy is fearless. He came at me every single play. I know he is gunning for me, and I know it's important for him to have a good game."

A major difference between this year and last will be ASU's fan support. Sun Devil Stadium, which seats more than 73,000, has been sold out for months.

"It'll be a packed house," Plummer said. "People hanging off the lights as far as I know."

Sun Devil tight end Steve Bush said the crowd will help Arizona State.

"There is a lot of excitement around here regarding the game," said Bush, a senior from Phoenix who caught three passes against NU a year ago. "Anytime you play the No. 1 team in the nation, you better be excited."
