A look at crime on campus and in the community

NARCOTICS

Lincoln police found a small amount of suspected crack-cocaine on a Lincoln man they stopped at a convenience store Wednesday night.

Police contacted 19-year-old Stacie Harvey at the Gas 'N Shop at 400 West Cornhusker Hwy. because he was wanted on an arrest warrant, Sgt. Ann Heermann said.

When officers patted him down, they found 7 grams of suspected crack-cocaine rocks, Heermann said.

Police arrested Harvey for possession of narcotics and took him into custody.

Days promote tradition of helping

By KIMBERLY SWARTZ
Staff Reporter

Millions of volunteers across the nation will try to lend a helping hand as they celebrate the sixth annual "Make a Difference Day" on Saturday and Nov. 1.

Saturday, which is the national celebration, has been dedicated to help those in need through community service and volunteer activities. Nov. 1 is the Campus Day of Service, when students, faculty and staff will have the opportunity to work together on service projects.

The first "Make a Difference Day" was Feb. 29, 1992. Since then, USA WEEKEND magazine and The Points of Light Foundation have promoted the day as an annual tradition.

Gov. Ben Nelson and mayors across Nebraska encourage people to participate in the event, which is sponsored locally by the Nebraska Commission for National and Community Service.

"We want everyone to become dedicated to volunteering and help their community any way they can," said Christine Vu, administrative assistant for the Nebraska Commission for National and Community Service.

Last year, almost 4,000 Nebraskans were involved in community service projects, she said, and this year looks just as bright.

"Our state has been really dedicated to volunteerism," she said. "We have a terrific amount of volunteers from teenagers to senior citizens."

University of Nebraska-Lincoln students will have a chance to participate from noon to 6 p.m. on Nov. 1.

They can volunteer at University Child Care, Facilities Management,

Students with Disabilities, Landscape Services and East Campus greenhouses.

One of the biggest service projects will be beautifying the campus, said Amy Martin, community service assistant for Student Involvement.

So far, the university response has been encouraging, said Marilyn Bugenhagen, director of the office of Student Involvement.

"Volunteering benefits the community and students," she said. "It is very satisfying to know you are helping others. It really makes a difference in society."

To help with UNL's Campus Day of Service, call Student Involvement at 472-2454 to receive a form. For more information about "Make A Difference Day" project locations and start times call Christine Vu at 471-6225.

Physics classes go 'paperless'

The end result is a computerized physics classroom.

Students can use the computers to gather information on the World Wide Web, conduct research with electronic sensors, instantly plot experiment results and download unfinished assignments to their own personal computers.

In addition, all exams will be given on computers.

Fuller said he knows of no other universities with this kind of physics setup.

"We think it's unique," Fuller said. "There are other institutions that do distance homework, but we don't know of any place where students are doing assignments, homework and exams solely on computers."

Fuller said this setup might become typical of all classrooms in the future.

"It seems clear to me that this will be the way of the future," Fuller said.

"Imagine a classroom where all the students come in with laptop computers and take notes by typing what the lecturer says."

"Sooner or later the professor will realize that there's got to be a better way to get out the information than by projecting it on a wall."

Mild Husker fans need not apply

From Staff Reports

From red-painted faces to Husker doggie sweaters, Windsor Canadian wants to find Nebraska's most avid fans.

Fans should submit why they are the most fanatic Cornhusker in an essay of about 100 words, which can include supporting materials such as videos or photographs.

Entries must be received by Nov. 15. The grand-prize winner receives an RCA-brand DSS System and a year's supply of sports and entertainment programming from DIRECTV. The first-place winner receives a 27-inch Sony color television, and 10 second-place winners receive company T-shirts.

Entry forms and rules are available at participating liquor retailers. Consumers must be legal residents of Nebraska and 21 or older to enter.
