Pettit plans to experiment

BY SHANNON HEFFELFINGER

The Nebraska volleyball team plays host to Missouri and Iowa State this weekend, a pair of Big 12 Conference foes who have posted a total of one league victory.

So will the No. 7 Cornhuskers approach these matches against weaker league opponents as a chance to relax, or as an opportunity to make adjustments and experiment with their lineup?

NU Coach Terry Pettit indicated the latter.

"I'm looking forward to these matches," Pettit said. "Sometimes, when you play a weaker opponent, a coach doesn't look forward to it."

"But we're practicing well and introducing new things, and I want to see what happens with them in a live match."

The Huskers (19-3 overall and 10-1 in the conference) will get their chance tonight at 7:30 at the NU Coliseum. Nebraska is undefeated at home this year and currently battling No. 10 Texas A&M for the conference lead.

Missouri (0-20 and 0-12) limps into tonight's match physically and mentally beaten. The Tigers have not posted a victory since they defeated Eastern Illinois in five games last November.

"I don't know that any of us can really appreciate how much more difficult a 12-team conference with five nationally ranked teams is than an eight-team conference with two ranked teams is," Pettit said.

"As a coach, I really feel for (MU Coach) Disa Johnson."

Sophomore Jodi Maune leads Missouri at the net, posting 3.5 kills per game while hitting .192. Maune is one of five sophomores on the Tiger roster.

Nebraska has not lost to MU since 1982 and owns a 43-2-1 all-time record against the Tigers.

Saturday at 7:30 p.m., Iowa State (5-19 and 1-11) visits the coliseum with hopes of defeating the Huskers for the first time in 50 matches. The Cyclones are led by Sonya Van Helden, who is averaging a team-leading 4.2 kills per game.

ing some younger Huskers to gain valuable experience.

Freshman setter Kim Crandall — who started the ISU match because of a back injury suffered by Maria Hedbeck — was one player who benefited, responding with two service aces while serving 11 of NU's 16 points in the second game.

Tonia Tauke, another freshman, also sparkled in the three-game match, hitting .600 with five block assists.

Pettit said to expect more of the same this weekend.

"We're going to do some things a little different," Pettit said. "Offensively, we'll have some different options."

"Somebody like a Mandy Monson, who's been practicing really well, might see some more time. We may start in different rotations than usual."

DeForge directs NU into opener

BY PATRICK WYMAN
 Staff Reporter

After leading the Nebraska women's basketball team to just its third NCAA Tournament berth ever last season, Anna DeForge is hoping to help carry the Cornhuskers even further this year.

DeForge insists NU can eclipse last season's 19-10 record, despite losing three of five starters.

NU can take the first step toward building a solid foundation at 5 p.m. Saturday, when they play host to the Nebraska All-Stars in an exhibition game at the Bob Devaney Sports Center.

The Nebraska All-Stars' roster includes former NU stars Karen Jennings, Rissa Taylor and Pyra Aarden.

"We need to reduce our turnovers and upset some nationally ranked teams," said DeForge, a junior guard from Niagara, Wis.

Last season the Huskers finished third in the Big Eight and beat nationally ranked Colorado, Oklahoma State and North Carolina.

DeForge, along with senior forward Tina McClain, will handle the Huskers' scoring load early in the season while NU's freshmen mature.

"We need some depth," DeForge said. "We have some people with experience to play, but we need our newcomers to step up and play some big roles for us."

Last season DeForge led Nebraska, averaging 14.5 points and 6.8 rebounds per game. She also recorded 100 assists, 11 blocks and 51 steals.

"I basically want to improve from my sophomore season, but I'm not really thinking about that right now," DeForge said. "Team-wise, I just want to go further than we did in the NCAA Tournament. But I think our preseason is key, because we need to get off to a good start."
