WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, not the Federal Communications Commission, should deal with the liquor industry's decision to abandon its decades-old ban on TV advertising, an FCC commissioner said Monday.

FCC Commissioner James Quello said the agency has no legal authority to intervene. He said he opposed FCC Chairman Reed Hundt's suggestion two weeks ago that the FCC consider regulatory action if the TV industry doesn't uphold the ban voluntarily.

ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox have promised they would uphold the ban. But more than 1,000 individual TV stations and cable channels have yet to decide whether they'll air such ads.

Quello said Congress should deal with the issue legislatively upon its return in January.

Earlier this month, the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States decided to abandon the ad ban, which for 60 years barred radio ads promoting such products as vodka, tequila and whiskey and 12 years later extended the ban to television.

'Torn Notebook' sketches donated

From Staff Reports

The Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery recently received more than 70 sketches and other materials that contributed to the process of creating the sculpture, "Torn Notebook."

Sculptors Claes Oldenburg and Coosje van Bruggen have donated to the Sheldon 69 sketches and notes, 14 preliminary studies, two preparatory sculpture studies and the large wall-relief sculpture "Study for a Relief Combining Fragments of a Sketch and Writing, With Pencil Stub."

These works were created in the process of creating the imagery for "Torn Notebook," the sculpture in the new Madden Garden at 12th and Q streets.

The two artists had originally loaned the materials to the Sheldon to coincide with the exhibit's opening, and in a letter to gallery director George Neubert, Oldenburg wrote:

"In gratitude to you ... and all who made the installation of the "Torn Notebook" so successful, Coosje and I would like to donate the materials we loaned to you for the accompanying exhibition. ... We feel that this material which is an essential complement to the sculpture, showing its origins and relations to other work, belongs near the "Torn Notebook."

These works are displayed in the exhibition, "Torn Notebook: The Project," open for viewing through Dec. 1.

The Sheldon is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Kellogg expands breakfast with Lender's

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Kellogg wants to feed everyone at your breakfast table, including those who prefer toasted bagels to Frosted Flakes.

Kellogg Co. — the maker of Pop Tarts, Eggo frozen waffles and Frosted Flakes and Rice Krispies cereals — said Monday it is buying Lender's Bagels from Kraft Foods Inc. for $455 million. Lender's is the nation's biggest bagel maker — frozen, refrigerated and fresh — with annual sales of $275 million.

For Kraft, the deal ends its role in the bakery business. It sold off its other bakery businesses — including Entenmann's cookies and cakes and Boboli pizza crusts — more than a year ago to CPC International Inc. for $865 million.

Lender's "is very much consistent with Kellogg's long-standing tradition of nutrition and diet," said Joseph M. Stewart, Kellogg's vice president of corporate affairs.

The deal is expected to be completed by the end of the year and includes Lender's plants in West Haven and New Haven, Conn.; Mattoon, Ill.; and Buffalo, N.Y.

Stewart said the plants' 800 jobs will not be affected. Lender's is based in White Plains, N.Y.

Robert S. Morrison, Kraft's chairman and chief executive, said Lender's did not fit with the company's overall direction. Northfield, Ill.-based Kraft is owned by Philip Morris Cos.

Kellogg's stock fell slightly on the news, down 12 1/2 cents at $68.12 1/2 in late afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Philip Morris shares climbed 62 1/2 cents each to $101.75 in NYSE trading.
