

'Star Wars' shines again

From PREVIEW on page 12

confrontation between Han and Jabba the Hutt.

Other enhanced scenes will include newer, bigger explosions of Alderaan and the Death Star and cleaner special effects in the space battles.

Despite the huge interest in the films, the limited run times come from the age of the movie, he said.

"The film is 20 years old," he said, "but no one knows how much repeat business it will get."

Kinney said he hopes people realize these "Star Wars" movies are re-releases of the first three and not the new "Star Wars" movies George Lucas is working on.

"This is the original from 1977," he said.

Kinney said back in 1977, when he was an employee at both the now-closed Drive-In Theatre, 84th and O streets, and the Douglas 3 Theatre, he had his first contact with "Star Wars."

"The teaser (preview) for this movie came on the screen, and I thought to myself 'That sure looks interesting,'" he said.

Dave Livingston, president of Douglas Theatre Co., said the film caught everyone off-guard.

"The buzz coming from everyone who saw the preview was that they couldn't categorize it," Livingston said. "They didn't know if it could be called a science-fiction film."

"It was absolutely overwhelming from the business point of view." Hallinan said tickets for the 4:50 p.m. show would go on sale around 2 p.m., but nobody will be admitted into the theater until 3:30 p.m., and ticket sales probably won't stop there.

"If we sell out for the 4:50 show," Hallinan said, "we'll go ahead and start selling tickets for the 7:25 show. And if those sell out, we'll start selling tickets for the 9:55 show."

Maximum capacity for the Stuart is 900 people, but tickets will stop being sold at around 850, Hallinan said. "After 850, it's almost impossible to find a seat."

Band celebrates new baby

Taylor's wife, Heidi Ore, who is lead vocalist and bassist for Mercy Rule, has a more pro-active outlook.

"This baby for us is the ultimate mind-altering experience. We don't drink or do drugs — even the effects of our drummer, Ron, have begun to wear off," Ore said.

This "mind-altering experience" came about in the wake of a tumultuous time for Mercy Rule. Their label, Relativity Records, dropped all its bands — including Mercy Rule — nearly a year ago. The band was then burdened with the daunting task of finding a new label to produce its album.

Fortunately, Mercy Rule could count on the commitment of Lou Giordano, who has produced albums for everyone from the Goo Goo Dolls to Paul Westerburg to Bob Mould.

"I couldn't imagine how we could have picked someone more perfect to work with Mercy Rule," Ore said. "He really loved our band and our music."

Giordano's personal success and influence assisted in placing Mercy Rule on the MCA/Fort Apache label.

"Lou got us to do a demo, which he then sent to MCA," Taylor said. "He makes sure the right person hears the stuff and the label pays attention to what he says."

The album, currently in post production, will see release sometime in April.

"This record is just like 'Providence,' but all the songs have choruses now," Taylor said.

Drummer Ron Albertson said he thinks the new effort transcends the popular "Providence" release, and he credits the new producer and his input on the recording process.

"This one is most like us," Albertson said. "This is what I hear in my head when we're on stage. I really don't feel that 'Providence' is all that representative of what I hear on stage."

Mercy Rule's members all agreed that production quality in the performances for this album surpassed previous recordings, and they said they owe it to Giordano.

"This record has a theme, and it's about playing in a band for ten years," Ore said. "Zoie is the next ten years, and the songs from here on out might have some Zoie-isms in them."

Mercy Rule will bring a handful of its new songs to Knickerbockers, 901 O St., tonight in a concert with Sideshow. The music will begin at 10, and the cover charge is $3.
