Kubik warms up outside

By Shannon Heffelfinger Staff Reporter

Sometimes four seconds seem to last forever.

That's how much time remained in the first half of the Nebraska women's basketball team's game against 12th-ranked Kansas when Nicole Kubik received an inbounds pass near KU's basket. During those four seconds, the freshman guard decided it was time to break out of her shooting slump.

"I remember looking at the clock and seeing four seconds left," Kubik said. "I remember dribbling down and wondering if I should get closer to the basket or just get my feet set and shoot it. I decided to let it go, and it just went in."

The result was a half-court shot that barely touched the net. The 3pointer gave the Cornhuskers a 28-27 lead and added momentum at the break. But more importantly, it brought back Kubik's confidence.

"After I hit that one from half court, I was really feeling it," Kubik said. "Every time I touched the ball, I was looking to shoot it. I felt more comfortable and everything started falling for me."

Kubik converted four more attempts from beyond the 3-point arc, this was one game, and I need to shooting 5 of 8 for the game. With play within myself."

her 63 percent performance, the 5foot-10-inch guard raised her 3point percentage in conference games by 10 points.

Consistency from outside the 3point line is what NU Coach Angela Beck expected from Kubik when she recruited her from Class C-2 Cambridge High School.

Beck sensed there would be a hole with the loss of Kate Galligan. Galligan led the Huskers from outside the arc her senior season, shooting 46 percent.

Kubik appeared able to step into that role, gradually improving until falling into a mid-season funk that was punctuated by a 1 for 6 performance at Iowa State Jan. 30.

"After that, we talked to her about what her role is," Beck said, "and that's to shoot the 3. She's been struggling with decision making, but she's becoming better at knowing what to do."

Kubik said her ability to make good decisions will improve as her confidence grows.

"Anytime you come in as a freshman and you're a so-called shooter," Kubik said, "you always kind of worry about what the older people are going to think.

'I just have to remember that

He attended Notre Dame in 1995, spring of '96 to re-evaluate his future.

Accepting a football scholarship to play for the Fighting Irish might not have been the best decision he could have made, said Peter — who was heavily recruited by the Huskers as a defensive tackle in high school.

"I got caught up in the mystique," Peter said. "When you go there on a Bailey while he waits for all of his recruiting visit ... you really get caught previous medical records to be comup with all the glory that Notre Dame piled. has to offer. I don't think that I really made a very informed decision."

"The NU football program has said.

"I spoke with Coach Osborne before I came down. He told me that he'd love to have me and if I was unable to physically play football, I could be an undergraduate assistant."

Al Papik, NU's senior associate athletic director, said the Huskers will assist Peter in attempting to gain medical clearance to play.

"There certainly wasn't any underbut decided to return home in the standing when he came to Nebraska that he definitely would be able to play football," Papik said. "He just wanted to get back on track for a degree."

"But when he first had his accident, a medical institution sent me a lot of information on spinal injuries. Doing the research, I know the position that he plays (offensive line) is not a high-risk position for neck injury."

Peter is just anxious to get back on the field.

"It's a very important part of my If Peter's wish is granted, Papik life," Peter said. "It's hard to explain. There's just a certain feeling that you get when you walk out there on the football field. I haven't had that feel-overtime," Pierce said. "But they played well down the stretch and tied it up.'

In overtime the Jayhawks scored on all 13 of their possessions, and outscored the Huskers 22-17 to improve their record to 22-0 for the first time in Kansas his-

KU broke the previous record of 21-0 set in the 1935-36 season, but guard Ryan Robertson said the record was not as important as figuring out why the Jayhawks didn't play to their potential.

We need to do some serious soul-searching and find out what's wrong," Robertson said.

"We have to do a better job," said Williams, whose Jayhawk teams have a 235-56 record in his eight years at KU. "And I have to find the right buttons to push."

Backed by Williams' coaching, Kansas has been ranked No. 1 for 10 straight weeks.

To say that we have a problem," Robertson said, "that shows you the kind of attention and the kind of pressure here at Kansas University."
