A look at crime on campus and in the community

SEXUAL ASSAULT

A 27-year-old woman was sexually assaulted at Union College, 3800 S. 48th St., Thursday night. Lincoln Police Sgt. Ann Heermann said the woman was playing a piano in the basement of a building on campus. A man came up behind her and knocked her to the ground. He then punched her face and sexually assaulted her.

Police were called to Bryan Memorial Hospital where she was treated for cuts and scrapes.

She described the man to police as thin- to medium-build, 5 feet 7 inches to 5 feet 8 inches tall. She said the man's face was hidden by a dark blue or black ski mask.

LARCENY/FORGERY

Police discovered a chain of larceny and forgery last week that started Jan. 14 when several checkbooks and stereo equipment were stolen out of cars on the 1500 block of South Folsom Street, Heermann said.

On Jan. 15, someone attempted to write a check from one of the stolen checkbooks at Super Kmart Center, 3300 N. 27th St., but a clerk recognized the name on the check and knew it was not the man trying to write the check. The clerk attempted to stall him, but the man said he had to get his identification from his vehicle and did not return.

The man also wrote a forged check for $160 at Best Communications, 3300 O St. On Jan. 28, four checks returned to the United Northeast Bank of Ord had been forged. On Feb. 1, nine more checks were forged.

On Wednesday, a vehicle thought to be that of the thieves was observed at 14th Street and Pioneers Boulevard and was pulled over for not having license plates. A man and woman were in the car.

Inside, police found stolen stereo equipment and a graphic equalizer with the serial numbers removed. The suspect, 19-year-old Michael Winters, was arrested for possession of stolen property and forgery. The woman has not yet been charged.

Police later searched the woman's residence and found more stolen property, including electronic equipment, a .20-gauge shotgun, and a semi-automatic pistol, which was reported stolen between Dec. 12 and 13.

from Sebek, Minn., sat on a table, icing his thigh. Stripped of his hat and boots, he sat staring down at the ice on his leg.

He said he got too good of a foothold with his spurs, the bull jerked, and he pulled a muscle in his leg.

The Justin Boots Sportsmedicine program is designed for such injuries. Founded by J. Pat Evans and Don Andrews in 1980, Justin Boots

Sportsmedicine includes two truck and trailer rigs that haul medical equipment and supplies. The two mobile units move across the country every year to provide medical attention at more than 125 rodeos.

Mike Livergood, an associate athletic trainer for the program and a teacher at Bellevue University, works with the program when it comes to the Lincoln and Omaha areas.

"The athletes here appreciate what you are doing. And they really want to get better," Livergood said. "If they don't ride, they don't get paid."

Foster said he got started as an athletic trainer for cowboys when he and a friend were putting on chute seminars for Little Britches rodeos. He said the seminars taught children how to mount a bull or bronc properly and safely. They branched out from there and began teaching children about treating minor injuries.
