That's right, Gateway 2000 is coming to The University of Nebraska at Lincoln, and we request the honor of your presence.

Our company was created with the belief that honesty and teamwork could accomplish just about anything. Apparently, we were right. Because in just over a decade, we've become the leading PC direct marketer in the nation with over $5 billion in annual sales.

And even though we're a high-tech company, we're not just looking for computer people. We have openings for everyone from Engineers to Management Information Systems, and from Sales to Human Resources. So, if you share our attitude, maybe you can share in our success.

A representative will be available to tell you about our GW2K College Relations Programs and answer any questions you may have regarding Gateway 2000. Such as, why a cow for a high-tech computer company? Come to the Info Session and find out.

Huskers tumble despite effort

By MITCH SHERMAN
 Senior Reporter

The Nebraska women's gymnastics team placed second out of three teams Sunday in Ann Arbor, Mich., despite posting the second-highest score in Cornhusker history.

But Michigan's Sarah Cain recorded two perfect 10s en route to a 39.825 to pace No. 7 Michigan to a team score of 197.3.

Sixth-ranked Nebraska scored a 195.575, and Illinois State placed third at 189.9.

NU sophomore Misty Oxford won the vault with a 9.95, but the Wolverines captured each of the other three events with 10s. Cain won the balance beam and the floor exercise, and Nikki Peters also received a perfect score in the uneven bars.

Bartlett placed second in the vault and third in the floor exercise for Nebraska, which lost freshman all-arounder Heather Brink to a foot injury during her floor routine.

Brink didn't compete on the beam, but Nebraska still managed a 49.0 in the event. Husker Coach Dan Kendig said he hoped Brink's injury would not keep her from competing in Nebraska's next meet, Saturday against Denver in Lincoln.

Kendig said Michigan, which edged NU for a spot in the Super Six last season at the NCAA Championships, competed well at home.

"They're a good team," Kendig said. "They were definitely better than we were today. But I'm looking forward to meeting them on a neutral floor. I really believe that down the road, they can't improve as much as us."

In Albuquerque, N.M., the sixth-ranked Nebraska men's team fell to No. 11 New Mexico 226.725 to 224.25 on Saturday. NU junior Bill Mulholland won the all-around for the second time this season with a score of 56.5, and Husker freshman Derek Leiter placed second with a 55.4.

Nebraska sophomore Marshall Nelson won the floor exercise and the high bar; J.D. Reive and Blake Bukacek tied for second in the pommel horse; Leiter finished third in the parallel bars and the vault; and Mulholland placed second in the floor and third in the rings.

Wrestlers win twice

The Nebraska wrestling team beat No. 13 Michigan State and Central Michigan Sunday to extend its dual winning streak to five.

Tenth-ranked Nebraska (13-4) beat the Spartans 29-13 and defeated the Chippewas 26-7.

Against Michigan State, NU trailed 4-0 after David Morgan beat Todd Beckerman 8-0 at 118 pounds. Nebraska won the next six classes with Jeramie Welder (126) winning 25-6, Brad Canoyer (134) won 10-5, Allen Hawkins (142) pinned Sam Hakim, Ryan Bauer (150) won 12-3 and Jason Kraft (158) won in a major decision over Adam Elderkin. Monte Christensen beat Will Hill 10-4 at 167.

Heavyweight Tolly Thompson won with a 17-2 technical fall against Marco Sanchez.

Against CMU, Beckerman beat Ahmad Sanders 7-5, Welder beat Jay Vesperman 11-6, Canoyer defeated Greg Mayer 5-2, Kraft won 11-6, Christensen won 9-5 against Mike Greenfield, Charles McTorry (177) beat Brain Ferritto 5-2, Scott Munson (190) squeaked by Mike Griggs 7-6 and Thompson beat Dave Hunter 24-9.

tory, Bentz said, the Huskers made progress toward the Big 12 Conference meet Feb. 27-March 1 at College Station, Texas.

"This meet opened our eyes," Bentz said. "It showed us clearly where we have strength and depth and where we have to make adjustments."

Associate Coach Rick Paine said the results of the meet follow the Huskers plan of attack for the conference meet.

"We have just begun to taper," Paine said. "We saw a really nice response. Most of our swimmers swam literally out of their minds."

erybody else."

In the long jump, the Nebraska men took first and second as junior Chris Wright defeated teammate and two-time defending Husker Invite champion Joe Laster with a leap of 25-1/2.

Another field event dominated the spotlight during the invite. The women's shot put showcased five of the top six women in the nation. Southern Methodist's Teri Steer was the only one missing from the competition. Steer, a native of Crete, suffered a broken leg Wednesday and missed the meet.

Marika Tuliniemi, also of SMU, dethroned Nebraska's Tressa Thompson as the current top thrower in the nation.

On her third throw, Tuliniemi's toss of 58-2 vaulted her into the lead. Thompson finished second with a throw of 56-8 3/4, an NCAA automatic mark.

Nebraska track and field coordinator Mark Kostek said he was disappointed to see Thompson finish second, but was excited to see such a competitive finish in the event.

Also shining for the Husker men was sprinter Tom Fish. Fish matched his season-best (21.56 seconds) with a victory in the 200-meters. Fish also finished fifth (6.79 seconds) in a stellar 60-meter field.

No team scoring was kept during the Husker Invite. For NU, the invite was the last tuneup before the Big 12 Championship at the Devaney Center Feb. 21-22.

"Overall, I'm very pleased with how the meet went," Pepin said. "This is definitely the type of competition we'll be facing at the conference meet in two weeks."

Huskers outlast Texas Tech

to Kubik in NU's run.

What was better than McClain's offense was her defense on Thompson. Thompson finished the game with 20 points — one below her season average — but she only connected on 8 of 19 shots.

McClain was quick to credit her teammates for their defensive success in limiting the Red Raiders to 38 percent shooting for the game.

"All week long the coaches have told us to beat a team like Texas Tech, you have to have a total-team effort," McClain said. "I've been working really hard in practice to have an all-around effort."

McClain extended Nebraska's lead to 11 after making a field goal with 14:02 left, but then thoughts of last Sunday's 12-point blown second-half lead against Kansas started entering the minds of the Huskers. The Jayhawks stormed out of Lincoln with a 67-59 after trailing.

"We tried to keep those thoughts out of our mind," said Anna DeForge, who finished with a double-double scoring 14 points and grabbing 11 rebounds. "We let the Kansas game slip out of our hands but we weren't going to do that today."

"We needed to get back on track and we needed to be tough at home, and it's obvious we did that."

After McClain's field goal NU made only three free throws over the next seven minutes as Tech cut the lead to 47-43 with seven minutes remaining.

ANGELA BECK
 NU women's basketball coach

McClain ended the Husker drought making a basket with 6:47 left, and Jami Kubik's two free throws a minute and a half later gave Nebraska a seven-point lead.

However, the Red Raiders rallied with four straight buckets, including two 3-pointers by sophomore Rene Hanebutt, to lead 57-56 with 1:27 remaining.

Kubik hit two free throws with 54 seconds left to put NU in front for good. Nebraska made 6 of 7 free-throw attempts in the final minute, and forced Texas Tech into two turnovers as the Huskers preserved the victory.

"First of all the monkey is off our back in that we will be riding high now," Beck said. "It's a difference maker for the (NCAA) Tournament. Them coming off the win against Texas and us beating them legitimizes our program."

"After having back-to-back losses it would have been huge to have lost here."
