

Campus Recreation Center requests funding increase

By SARAH BAKER
Staff Reporter

A new climbing wall in the Lee and Helene Sapp Campus Recreation Center is one reason Campus Recreation said it needed a budget increase at Tuesday's Committee for Fees Allocation meeting.

CFA considered the proposed increases Campus Recreation requested after passing the budget request for the University Health Center.

The health center requested and received its $3.34-million request, which was not an increase from the 1996-97 budget. The committee said it was pleased with the clear, concise budget request from the health center.

Committee members and health center representatives discussed future expenses for the health center, including an enhanced Health Aide program and other specific health-care services.

When Campus Recreation stepped up to bat, it requested a budget increase of 6.9 percent.

Director of Campus Recreation Stan Campbell said he needed the increases to maintain the recreation center's high standards of serving students.

"Student support is vital to the recreation center," Campbell said. "To keep the students coming, we need to maintain the quality services that the center provides."

The climbing wall the center is installing will also add to costs.

Assistant Director of Campus Recreation Bill Goa said the climbing wall will be an added draw for students to use the center.

"We are striving to have the best rock-climbing wall in Nebraska," Goa said.

The ideal wall will have a natural rock surface, but there are some possible drawbacks associated with such a wall.

"There is an added cost for the actual rock wall, and we also don't know if the wall that is in the center can support that much weight," Goa said.

Goa and Campbell talked about possible plans to build a 12-court tennis complex near Harper-Schramm-Smith or Cather-Pound Residence Halls.

Although the idea was in its early stages, they hoped to have it ready by 1998 or 2000.

Another part of the proposed budget requested higher wages for recreation center staff because of minimum-wage increase laws.

The Campus Recreation-East also asked for additional funds. The center was used 33 percent more during last fall semester than the 1995 fall semester. However, the center does not have any supervision.

The requested money will go for one person to staff the center in case of emergencies or to assist students with questions.

CFA will vote on Campus Recreation's budget request Thursday.

Sue Tidball nominations requested

Humanitarians are hard to find. Such a person may be standing in front of a class or processing students' personal information, answering phones, or cleaning up the mess left by disrespectful students.

If students have someone in mind, then it is their duty to nominate that person for the Sue Tidball Award for Creative Humanity, the Rev. Larry Doerr of Campus Ministries said.

The award recognizes people at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln who bring justness and togetherness to others around them, Doerr said. The Tidball awards recognize all those who make an extra effort to go beyond their job descriptions.

Many of these people may go unnoticed, Doerr said, but everybody around these types of people benefit, whether they know it or not.

The award was set up to follow the example of Sue Tidball, a member of Campus Ministries until her death in 1976.

Although Tidball was diagnosed with a terminal illness at age 30, she was active in counseling groups around campus, volunteering at the Malone Center and helping work with interracial concerns.

Nominations are due Feb. 17 and the honorees will be awarded March 16.

Nomination forms can be picked up at residence hall desks, Student Involvement, the Culture Center or the greek affairs office.
