

Greek Week celebrates system

Greek Week at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has two objectives this year: to draw stronger lines of communication and to form new friendships between greek houses.

Andrew Poltz, chairman of this year's activities, said he hoped the week will be a positive experience for everyone.

"The goal is to bring people together, to get people to know each other and to have fun doing it," Poltz said.

Greek Week's theme this year is "Piecing Together a Greater Whole," which chairman Doug Brummels said is an effective theme to promote greek life.

"It's an important event for the greek system. It's the time of year we can celebrate our accomplishments," he said.

The week's activities, scheduled for every night through Saturday, begins with a speech tonight at the Lied Center for the Performing Arts.

Joel Goldman and T.J. Sullivan will talk about their experience with AIDS tolerance. Goldman and Sullivan are college fraternity brothers, and one them was diagnosed with AIDS after graduation. The speech is open to the public.

On Tuesday, groups of two fraternities and one sorority — called triads — will create banners to display outside their houses. Greeks will also celebrate by wearing clothes and jewelry with their houses' letters.

Houses will participate in greek olympics Wednesday, competing in a variety of sports including volleyball, tug of war and miniature golf. The competition will be at the golf green behind Harper-Schramm-Smith Residence Halls.

Thursday, a banquet will honor greek olympics and Greek Week delegates. Representatives from the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Association will be present.

Triads will have informal barbecues Friday, followed by a block party at the Reunion building from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. This activity also is open to all UNL students with ID.

The week will wrap up Saturday with a volunteer car wash behind the University Lutheran Chapel. The proceeds will be donated to community organizations, including Habitat for Humanity.

Brummels said the events this year have been designed to involve and excite everybody.

"In past years, we've seen some apathy toward the events," he said. "We're hoping to change that."

Poltz said he thinks this year's activities will be more highly regarded than in past years.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm for Greek Week at UNL," Poltz said. "People want to get involved."
