Public access proposal defeated in Legislature

From Staff Reports

Legislature

Legislators defeated a proposal Monday designed to protect citizen access to public records and prevent electronic media companies from gaining a monopoly on the dissemination of public information.

Amendment 1468 to LB590, sponsored by Sen. Curt Bromm of Wahoo, would have required state agencies to provide public records in any form requested by citizens and at a reasonable cost.

Supporters argued the measure was necessary for preventing agencies from denying citizens information in written form on the grounds that it was available through the state's developing Gateway system.

Gateway, which is a joint effort of the state government and Nebraska Online, refers to any centralized electronic information system by which government agencies can provide information regarding public records. Supporters warned that if Gateway became the sole means for obtaining public records, a monopoly would be created.

"I am agreeable to creating Gateway, but I do not support making that the exclusive method of getting information," Bromm said.

Opponents argued that the measure would undermine efforts to streamline government records and their distribution.

A look at crime on campus and in the community

Terroristic threats

A man who got into an argument with his plumber Saturday night threatened him by putting a gun in his face.

Glen Pumel went to 3027 U St. about 8 p.m. on a service call. As he was working, Pumel and 34-year-old Khai Vuong got into an argument over work that was done at the house sometime before Pumel arrived.

Pumel then tried to leave, Lincoln Police Sgt. Ann Heermann said, but Vuong pulled out a snubnose .38-caliber revolver and told him he was not leaving. She said Pumel then used his cellular phone to call 911.

Police arrived and found a .38 revolver in an upstairs bedroom. Vuong was booked for making terroristic threats, which is a felony.
