such as available actors and required rehearsal time.

The event presents a unique opportunity for not only the playwright, but for the actors and audience as well.

"I think people don't realize that there can be people in Nebraska who write," Crabb said. "This event helps people to realize that there are people we pass everyday on the street who have the ability to do something great."

Working with an original script also adds pressure to a cast and crew because they do not have the previous productions to rely on for interpretation.

There can also be problems transferring the play from page to stage.

"Some of the things that look good on paper don't sound good when they come out of an actor's mouth," Crabb said.

Though the productions have been challenging, the directors have enjoyed experimenting with the various scripts.

"It's been a joy conceptualizing this script," Holman said.

The shows run Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and on Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Studio Theatre of the Temple Building. Admission is $3.

the year 2000 before anyone else" an allusion to its desire to create a new and dynamic sound transcending current musical trends.

"We're definitely that TV generation, for the worse," Diederich said. "We have a song now called 'Man in the Universe' — it's about Burt Reynolds saving the world."

By bringing its vision of modern music to Nebraska, Front of Truck will headline an extremely diverse and eventful evening.

Sponsors of the program include Pepsi, Homers, Amigos, Pizza Hut and Exotica who, among others, will be distributing everything from food to compact discs to hemp jewelry.

Along with the variety of freebies, volleyball will be available as well as several raffles for prizes like music and gift certificates.

Friday's show will take place on the greenspace north of Nebraska Union from 3:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Admission is free.

In the event of rain, both the time and place will change. The concert will be postponed until 5 p.m. and moved to Nebraska Union's Centennial Room.
