

Union expansion remains on schedule

most of the south side of the basement between the two stairwells.

On the second story of the Union, two new suites of meeting rooms are being built, along with a 300-seat sloped-floor auditorium. New offices for Student Involvement and a student involvement resource center will be built.

This resource center will have services for students to make posters, address labels and other needed supplies for student organizations. It will also be open until 9 or 10 p.m. each night for students' convenience.

The plaza in front of the Union on the north side will be the last part of the expansion, Swanson said. This should be done in the summer of 1998, Blake said.

Toward the beginning of the second semester of the 1997-98 school year, the building should be completely enclosed, Blake said. After that, construction will proceed at a much faster rate.

The new addition is one of many parts that have been added on to the original 1938 Nebraska Union building, Blake said. The part of the Union that faces "R" street is the original building, but as it extends further north, changes in the building mark parts that were added throughout the years.

This newest addition will give the building a 60-year construction history, as one side of the building was erected in 1938 and the other in 1998.

Just Moved, Want to Belong

It isn't easy to live in our mobile society and still feel that you belong. Our Unitarian Universalist churches know that. So we are a community where you quickly find out that there are other who care. We are a people who let you know that you belong. Choose the Unitarian Universalist group nearest you, or visit:
