WKU coach expected to sign with NU

By MIKE KLUCK
Staff Reporter

Western Kentucky University women's basketball coach Paul Sanderford is expected to be named the new Nebraska women's basketball coach at a press conference in Lincoln on Friday.

Two unnamed sources have confirmed Sanderford will replace former Husker coach Angela Beck, who resigned at the end of April for a position with the San Jose Lasers of the American Basketball League. Sanderford, who is the winningest coach in Western Kentucky history, also has a confirmed Lincoln hotel reservation.

Sanderford had been Western Kentucky's coach for 15 years and led the Hilltoppers to 12 NCAA Tournament appearances in the last 13 seasons. This season Western Kentucky qualified for its 14th straight postseason tournament and lost to Arizona in the first round of the NCAA's.

Sanderford's biggest success at WKU came in 1992 when he led the Hilltoppers to the NCAA Championship game before losing to Stanford. The Hilltoppers have advanced to the Final Four three different times under Sanderford, who has compiled a 365-120 overall record at Bowling Green, Ken.

He will be taking over a program that has gone to just three NCAA Tournaments and has only one won game. All three NCAA appearances were during Beck's 11-year term as head coach.

Nebraska finished this past season 19-9. The Huskers started the season with a school best nine game win streak but finished the season 2-6 and failed to qualify for the NCAA Tournament.

Sanderford will be inheriting one of Nebraska's most talented squads. All-American honorable mention player Anna DeForge will be returning for her season. Also last season Nebraska had four freshman who played throughout the year and gained experience.

Last week, it was announced that Beck's assistant, Theresa Becker, would not get the position. Becker and Sanderford were the two remaining candidates for the job.

Becker had been Beck's top assistant eight of the last 11 years.
