Union NBC bank may move to more accessible location

BY DARREN IVY
Staff Reporter

An underexposed NBC bank in the Nebraska Union may make a move to the north side addition and make banking a little easier for students.

At the Nebraska Union Board meeting Tuesday, the 12 members discussed several issues including a possible move by NBC bank, budget increases to pay for the expanded union, union grand opening celebration plans, and two faculty member replacements for board positions.

The board agreed to invite NBC bank representatives to a future board meeting. At that meeting, the NBC representatives will be able to discuss the possibility of moving their bank from its current location in the south part of the union to the new addition.

Several problems already exist, though. One of the problems is there is no room allocated for the bank in the new addition. A second problem is that the bank's owners just signed a new lease for their current location. Board members will have to take these problems into consideration when they make a final decision later this year.

Bank officials told Nebraska Unions Director Daryl Swanson

that they wanted it to be located in the new addition because they spoke to some students who didn't even know a bank existed in the union. They thought the new location would make the bank more visible to students. The proposed new location would be smaller than the existing location, Swanson said.

Another issue discussed involved the board's budget for 1998. To pay for the increased costs of the larger union, the board plans to ask the ASUN Committee for Fee Allocations for more student fee money. Swanson estimated that the utility costs would increase $40,000 with the expanded square footage of the new building and that hiring another janitor would cost $15,000 a year.

“We may find out how students feel about the union with their decision on this issue,” Swanson said.

The money the board is asking for will be separate from the $20 per semester increase in student fees that was approved two years ago. Board President Saad Alavi said a survey was given to students two years ago asking if they would be willing to pay additional student fees to finance union expansion. The majority agreed and a plan was made to increase fees for this year, Alavi said.

Union expansion is scheduled to be completed by September 1998, Swanson said. A grand opening celebration committee will plan activities during the 1998 spring semester, but members of the board started discussions last night. Nothing was finalized, but several members agreed to look into organizing the planning committee.

In other news, the board voted to ask the Academic Senate to fill two vacant faculty member positions on the board. The board's bylaws state that one of the new members must be from East Campus and one from City Campus. The two faculty members on the board are responsible for representing the views of their fellow faculty, Swanson said.
